2 FEARED DEAD IN FIRE, SAFE

Find Two Thought Buried

LITTLE BUT ASHES!

BURNED OUT!

FEARED MISSING—SAFE

Mrs. Sarah Belbos and son, John, for a time could not be found and their bodies were believed to be buried in this debris-choked cellar. Later they were found safe.

FIREMEN HAMPERED

Water poured on the blaze washed down over this hillside, at the top of which the mute ruins reach towards the sky, and carried down mud and debris to Bigelow boulevard. The topography of the vicinity hindered firemen in their work near the blaze.

Nature's Trade Balance.
Values Go Up, Up.
To Educate Congress.
One Year's Wine $25.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1928.)

GALLUP, N. M., March 16.—IN Arizona where this is written, near the border of New Mexico, wild turkeys and Chinese pheasants are turned loose, invited to increase and multiply, as a state enterprise. Barring coyotes and foxes, pheasants and turkeys should thrive amazingly in Arizona, New Mexico and California on an abundant fillaree and insect diet.

TO kill off coyotes, thus interfering with nature's "balance of trade" is sometimes dangerous. They made that discovery in Montana where coyotes were killing young lambs. A big bounty disposed of the coyotes. Then field mice, with no coyotes to eat them, got rid of the alfalfa, leaving nothing for the lambs to eat.

THIS the biggest year that Wall Street ever saw. Thus far makes 1927 which held the record, look like a "dull market." So far, 1928 has sold 38,000,000 more shares than were sold in the same period of 1927.

CONSIDER how American values change, before you decide that we have reached the maximum. On Thursday the total value of General Motors stock rising to $163 a share, increased $104,400,000.

That is seven times as much as the United States paid for the whole Mississippi valley, when it made the Louisiana Purchase deal with Spain 125 years ago. And it is thirteen times what Seward paid for Alaska. They called that purchase "Seward's Folly." Don't sell this country short. You never can tell what things will be worth. Prices go up and go down, but mainly UP in the long run.

LINDBERGH renders service to aviation by inviting all Senators and Representatives to fly with him. He would take Congressmen up ten at a time, in an Army or Navy plane, show them almost how a plane runs itself, tell them how he once flew from St. Louis to Springfield without touching "the stick." If Congress would be made to KNOW OF ITS OWN KNOWLEDGE that flying is a reality and especially if Lindbergh could take them in an Army machine, and drop a few harmless imitation bombs, as he flew, the country might spend a few real dollars on air defense.

PLAYED "DIRTY," HE SAYS

BROOKSVILLE, Fla., March 17.—E. S. McCullough, who conducted a coal strike survey for the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce in 1925, came to the defense of that organization last night in a statement which also included a severe criticism of the Pittsburgh Coal Company. The Chamber of Commerce played fair all the way through, but the Pittsburgh Coal Company was "dirty," McCullough said. McCullough now lives on a small farm near here.

The coal company, he said, met opposition in James C. Chaplin, president of the Colonial Trust Company, who was chairman of the chamber's special committee at the time of the survey. There was considerable arguing between Chaplin and W. G. Warden, chairman of the board of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, when the coal company tried to manage the investigation, McCullough said. When T. M. Dodson, one of the coal company's vice presidents, was fired, McCullough said he quit.

McCullough said that attempts were made to have him return to complete the work.

CHECK FORGER GIVEN FIVE-YEAR SENTENCE

William Hardman, 37, of 335 Wilbur street, Knoxville, was sentenced to the penitentiary for two and one-half to five years by Judge Joseph M. Swearingen yesterday in Criminal Court. He admitted he had forged the name of Elliott E. Perritt, president of the Perritt Iron and Roofing Company, to more than 100 checks, which aggregated about $14,000 in two years. He was the company's office manager.

Just a little Shamrock—
But it's all the world to me.
'Tis a thing that men have died for
That its birthplace might be free!
It reminds me of the Shannon,
Flowing peaceful on its way,
Of the things we hoped and planned for
Along its banks of clay;
It reminds me of Killarney
And her lakes of silver strand—
Shure, man made the city,
But Killarney's God's own hand;
It reminds me of Blarney Castle
And the stone that sits on high—
How the lads and lassies kissed it
As fine wishes they would sigh!
So I could go on forever,
With memories the Shamrock brings;
'Tis on this day it's dearest
And my warm Irish heart sings—
Oh! colleens and laddies, just listen,
The Shamrock whispers to me,
Whispers to me its message—
"May its birthplace ever be free!"

Find 2 Safe After Fire

Fears that a mother and her son had perished in the fire which early today destroyed five frame dwllings in Arcena street, Hill district, were dispelled at noon when police located both outside the fire ruins.

They were Mrs. Sarah Belbos, who fled from her home at 2145 Arcena, which was caught in the blaze, and gone to a neighbor's home, and her son, John Belbos, 30, who was found working on a boat in the Monongahela River.

TWO INJURED

Hoseman Harry Sellers of No. 5 Engine Company, was cut on the right arm and Wagonman Thomas Martin of the Center Avenue Police Station, was burned on the hands when he rescued Anna Belt, Negro, and her two children.

The fire destroyed the houses at Nos. 2139, 2141, 2143, 2145 and 2147 Arcena street and it was reported seven families resided in the row. Police and firemen this morning were unable to check up on the families as they became separated and scattered during the excitement of the fire.

Difficulty was encountered by firemen in getting apparatus to the scene of the fire, which was on the cliff overlooking the Bigelow boulevard a short distance east of the Seventeenth Street Incline. Water poured on the blaze coursed down the cliff, carrying debris and mud which spread across the boulevard to a depth of several inches.

IRONWORKER CONFESSES HE IS ELWELL MYSTERY SLAYER

POLICE ARE CHECKING STORY

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN,
International News Service.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Michael Reegan, a 33-year-old Brooklyn ironworker, startled police officials today by asserting that he had shot and killed Joseph B. Elwell, sportsman and bridge expert, in Elwell's apartment at 244 West Seventieth street, New York City, on the night of June 10, 1920.

"The Elwell case" has been one of the most famous of unsolved murder mysteries. Countless clews had been run down at intervals for years, always to no avail.

While Reegan told a straightforward story, the authorities preferred to remain skeptical of his confession until they had checked it in every detail.

CONFESSION

Reegan's story, as made public by Inspector John J. Sullivan, of the Brooklyn police, was substantially as follows:

"I am the man who killed Joseph B. Elwell in his apartment at 4 o'clock in the morning several years ago. On the night before the shooting I went to Joe White's cabaret, at Fifty-fourth street and Eighth avenue, Manhattan, with Elwell, a girl named Viola Kraus, another named Eleanor McLaughlin, a Miss Winter, who is now in the 'Show Boat' company, and a Miss Reid."

"After the cabaret Elwell invited us to go to his home to spend the early morning hours. We all went there and had some gin. During the party Elwell went upstairs. Shortly after that he returned, wearing pajamas and a bathrobe. Elwell grabbed Miss Kraus and threw her against me.

"I fell on the floor. Elwell pulled at my clothing. Then he tried to throw Miss Kraus on the floor. I protested and I managed to get up and push Elwell back."

"ELWELL SHOT FIRST"

"Elwell pulled a small gun from a pocket in his bathrobe and fired one shot at me. I tried to get the gun away from him but I failed.

"I then pulled my gun, a .38 Smith & Wesson, and I fired two shots. One shot hit Elwell in the temple and the other hit him in the chest or shoulder.

"I picked Elwell up and sat him in a chair, the way he was found. Then Miss Kraus straightened up the room and we all left at 5 a. m. On my way out of Elwell's house, I met the milkman. We said 'Good morning' to each other.

"SELF-DEFENSE"

"I boarded a Seventh avenue subway train and on my way to Borough Hall I left my gun on the subway train. At the time of the shooting I was a guard employed in the United States Veterans' Bureau in Manhattan. I shot Elwell to protect our lives."

Inspector Sullivan asked Reegan at this point if he realized the seriousness of the statements he had made.

"Yes," replied Reegan. "I want to clear my conscience."

HAD BEEN DRINKING

Under further questioning by the police Reegan admitted he had been drinking "several days ago." He emphatically asserted that he was "all right" now and that his mind is clear, "particularly about this murder."

Inspector Sullivan, however, was inclined to discredit the man's story. It was finally decided to send Reegan to Bellevue Hospital psychopathic ward for observation while his story was being checked up.

THE HAMMER'S DROP

SENATOR REED SEES

Senate has clearly shown an unsympathetic attitude towards the present coal problem, emphasized by the bituminous strike.

BITTER DENUNCIATION

Commissioner Esch, it is conceded, was rejected because he reversed his position on the Lake Cargo coal rate case.

"The Senate bewails the conditions in the Pennsylvania coal fields," said Reed, "And then proceeds to punish Mr. Esch for trying to remedy them. The opponents frankly had the Lake Cargo rate case decision in mind and simply served notice that any man who trys to vote in favor of Pennsylvania will be lynched when nominated."

Senator Reed made an effort to have Cyrus E. Woods placed on the commission last session, but believes it is futile to seek further representation at this time.

"What is the use," he said. "They have demonstrated that they will oppose anyone from Pennsylvania or who is inclined to give Pennsylvania a square deal."

CHAMPION OF STATE

were given Ohio and Pennsylvania on coal shipped to lake ports.

SOUTH LEADS ATTACK

Southern Senators vigorously charge that Esch had discriminated against the West Virginia and Kentucky coal fields, nearly all of which are non-union.

Senator Neely (Dem) of West Virginia headed the attack against Esch. The Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate had recommended that the renomination be rejected.

Senator Fess (Rep.) of Ohio and other northern Senators from the Great Lakes region supported Esch. They contended that the Lake Cargo decision was necessary in order to give Ohio and Pennsylvania coal operators opportunity to compete with the cheaper southern coal and regain their lost lake port markets.

Southern mine operators, however, are planning to take their fight against the commission's order into the courts. The commission recently refused to give southern railroads a lower rate on coal from West Virginia.

HAMMER BOUNDS, GIRL HURT

Bounding across the street and shattering a window after falling 21 floors, a hammer struck and injured seriously Miss May Grace Hahn, 21, of 835 Concord street, North Side, yesterday while she was at work yesterday afternoon. Miss Hahn, a clerk at Reymers store, Frick annex building, was taken to the Mercy Hospital, where physicians this morning said that her condition was improved today.

A blood transfusion was submitted to by her brother, Frank J. Hahn, 22, and Miss Hahn rallied slightly. The hammer was dropped by Harry Eichenlaub, 23, of 227 Cedarville street, while he was knocking out falsework three floors from the top of The Pittsburgher, hotel under construction in Diamond street at Cherry way. Scores of persons were passing as the hammer struck the street, bounded across the thoroughfare and then smashed a large window. Miss Hahn was working near the window and the hammer struck her on the head. Glass from the shattered window cut her severely.

Policeman Charles J. Schierlein, who was nearby placed her in a taxicab and had her taken to the hospital.

The hotel, the property of Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, is being erected by a New York organization.

Weather Conditions.

The disturbance that was central over the Gulf of Mexico yesterday morning, moved northeastward during yesterday, producing rain as far north as West Virginia and snow over Western Pennsylvania and Ohio. This morning the disturbance is centered over Florida. It is still producing rain in the east Gulf states, and cloudiness over the entire East. Another disturbance is centered over Manitoba and extends southward over the northern plains. It is causing cloudiness over that section, but little precipitation. There is another low developing in the Southwest.

High pressure stretches from the Great Lakes southwestward over the Mississippi Valley states to Texas. It is attended by clear skies, generally and moderately cold. The temperatures are freezing and below as far south as Central Texas, and over the upper lakes they are near zero. Another high has developed over the Far Northwest.

River Conditions.

Moderately heavy rains and melting snow at the headwaters of the Monongahela River is causing a slight rise in that river, but the Allegheny and its tributaries and the Ohio River are falling. Stage at Pittsburgh 16.0 feet and at Dam No. 2, 8.1 feet. All dams are down. The Monongahela River will continue to rise slowly. The Allegheny and the Ohio will continue to fall.

PANAMA FLIER DROPS IN RIVER

MEXICO CITY, March 17.—(AP.)—Dispatches from Puerto, Mexico, to El Universal today said that Ira C. Eaker, pilot of one of the American amphibian planes en route to Panama, had a narrow escape in landing at Minatitlan yesterday.

F. Trubee Davison, American assistant secretary of war for aviation, and Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of the air corps, apparently were not involved in the accident.

Eaker flying the Plane 2874 took a nosedive into the Coatzacoalcos River in alighting in front of the Minatitlan Oil Refinery. He saved himself by jumping overboard and suffered only a bruised nose. Efforts are being made to refloat the plane, the wings of which are under the water.

Gen. Navarro was quoted as saying Mr. Davison decided to postpone his flight to Panama and to remain at Minatitlan until another plane arrives from Panama.

ALTOONA, Pa., March 17.—(AP.)—One-month-old twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Miller were dead today, victims of a fire which last night partially destroyed the Miller home near New Paris, Bedford county. The mother made several futile attempts to mount the stairs to the room in which the twins slept.

SNOW-HELD PATIENT RESCUED

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., March 17.—(AP.)—An Army airplane, piloted by Lieut. Joseph Soper, which yesterday carried food and supplies to snowbound Detour, was credited with saving the life of Russell Goetz, of Detour, who was brought to a hospital here on the return flight of the plane.

Goetz, suffering from blood poisoning, had been awaiting medical attention in the isolated district for the past 10 days. Hospital physicians said he had been brought here just in time to save his life.

Lieut. Soper made two trips to Detour yesterday with badly needed supplies. On a return flight to Sault Ste. Marie medical supplies were dropped overboard at Raber, Mich., where Mrs. Wallace Benson, a resident, has been critically ill.

Dr. John F. Deadman, with his dog team, the first person to reach the village, was several hours ahead of the plane with a small supply of food and tobacco. He and his dog team were on the verge of exhaustion when they reached Detour.

FUELLESS INVENTOR RETURNS

Lester Hendershot, inventor of the "fuelless" motor, and Barr Peat, his companion in the recent attempts to interest Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in the motor, returned yesterday from Washington where Hendershot was confined in a hospital suffering from electrical shocks said to have been received while experimenting with the motor. Peat and Hendershot last night attended a banquet of the McKeesport chapter of the National Aeronautic Association held in the Penn-McKee Hotel.

Hendershot could not be reached this morning, but Peat told of their arrival home yesterday.

"How is Hendershot?" Peat was asked.

"Oh, he's getting along all right," he answered.

"How did he get shocked?"

"While working on his motor," Peat replied.

"Was he hurt badly?" was the next question.

"We don't care to talk about it," replied Peat.

Peat said Hendershot was probably at his home in West Elizabeth, but he refused to discuss the motor, which he admitted was damaged by the electricity which shocked Hendershot in Washington. Peat would not say what his connection was with Hendershot and his motor, and when pressed as to his reason for accompanying the inventor to Washington, declared that he was "just a friend."

Hendershot sat at the speakers' table at the banquet given in honor of Clarence D. Chamberlin, trans-Atlantic flier, who is making a tour of the country to promote interest in the establishment of airports. Mrs. Chamberlin is accompanying her husband and was entertained by the women's reception committee. Will Pfaff, president of the McKeesport Chamber of Commerce, presided.

The speakers beside the honor guest were Mayor George H. Lysle, Capt. Thomas S. Voss, commander of Rodgers Field and Col. H. C. Fry.

Will Is Peeved; He Loses Dime to John D.

TAMPA, Fla., March 17.—You can never tell in this world when positions will be reversed. The other night in Daytona Beach John D. and young John D. and family came to my little show. I was invited to the house for breakfast the next morning. On arriving the elder John D. made no effort to give me the customary dime whereupon I took out one and gave it to him.

WILL ROGERS

He took it. I'll say he took it. I went around the course with him. He is the only man I will watch play golf. There is some excuse for him playing it.

DETROITER IS KIDNAPED

DETROIT, March 17.—(AP.)—James E. Hall, 54, wealthy hotel and cafe proprietor, was kidnaped from his home in the exclusive Grosse Point village district here tonight, it was reported to police. The kidnapers demanded $10,000 ransom.

The kidnaping, which police believe to be a continuation of the activities of a gang of extortionists who have mulcted local persons of thousands of dollars during the last few months, was the second to occur here this week.

Harvey E. Watson, local labor leader, kidnaped last Monday, is being held for $25,000 ransom.

According to Hall's wife, two men came to the Hall home tonight and forced her husband to accompany them at the point of a pistol. She immediately reported the matter to police.

A short time later two other men arrived at the Hall home bearing a note signed by Mr. Hall relating that he had been kidnaped and requesting that she turn $10,000 over to the extortionists at a place designated in the note.

HUNT FAILS IN ME. FOR FLIERS

International News Service.

GREENVILLE, Me., March 17.—Hope for the safety of the trans-Atlantic plane "Endeavour" and its occupants, Capt. Walter Hinchliffe and the Hon. Elsie Mackay, was abandoned early today when searching parties from a hundred Maine logging camps failed to find trace of the daring fliers or their plane.

Sheriff Hodgers telephoned to the camps requesting that a search be made following reports that the huge golden-winged craft had been sighted and heard over the north woods of Maine. Officials here today expressed the belief that the reports were spread as a "practical joke."

The first report was that a guide and his wife saw a plane fly over the woods 25 miles north of here and then descend into the forest.

John Dyer and his wife were said to have heard the motor of a plane droning away at 5:45 a. m. on the morning of March 15, when the "Endeavour" would have exhausted its 50-hour cruising ability.

The cook of the logging camp of the Great Northern Paper Company was reported to have heard a plane five minutes later.

Postmaster William Cole, of Kokadjo, who was reported to have seen a brilliantly-colored plane whirr over the town at 6 o'clock that morning, today denied that he had seen the plane. Kokadjo is 20 miles distant from Greenville.

HOLE IN WALK, SUES CITY FOR $25,000

The City of Pittsburgh has been made defendant in a $25,000 damage suit filed by Margaret Arnold, who alleges she was injured June 22, 1926, when her foot caught in a hole in the sidewalk on Lyric street, and she was thrown to the ground and rendered unconscious. She avers the city was negligent in permitting a hole to remain in the sidewalk.

KENNEDY AVE. HOME ROBBED

Thieves stole $350 worth of jewelry and clothing, valued at $150, from the home of Frank L. Stulen, 433 Kennedy avenue, last evening during the absence of the family.

Two hundred dollars was taken from a chest on the third floor of the home of Mike Resko, 2214 Beaver avenue, last night. From the butcher shop of Mike Polyak, on the first floor, $10 was taken.

TIRE COMPANY SAFE IS LOOTED OF $21

Crowbars founds in the building were used by thieves to pry open a safe in the office of the Overman Cushion Tire Company, 435 Melwood street. Twenty-one dollars and titles to two autos were taken.

HIT-RUN MOTORIST KILLS MAN DOWNTOWN

A hit-and-run motorist early today ran down and fatally injured a man believed to be Michael Poleski, 35, at Fifth avenue and Grant street. The victim died three hours later in the Mercy Hospital. The partial identification was made from papers found in the man's clothing, which indicated that he lived in Duquesne way. Death was caused by internal injuries.

NIP DOWNTOWN FIRE; LOSS $100

An overheated stove caused fire damage estimated at $100 this morning on the first floor of the three-story brick building occupied by S. Delp's Sons, 1029 Liberty avenue. The fire was confined to a storeroom in the rear of the first floor. The flames were extinguished with chemicals by downtown firemen.

Potatoes, bread, lard, bacon, eggs and flour were distributed with a lavish hand and wives of the striking miners gratefully accepted succor for their families.

Players in Original Cast of "Three Musketeers" Will Be In Douglas Fairbanks' Sequel

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,

Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, March 17.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS paused from his imitation golf game on the United Artists lawn yesterday to tell me his plans for filming the sequel to "The Three Musketeers." You can always depend upon Douglas to offer something new. But this wins our annual prize for originality, Doug has rounded up all the players who were in the original "Three Musketeers" cast and handed them all their old roles back.

Marguerite De La Motte, who played the girl D'Artagnan loves, will again be Doug's leading lady. George Siegmann, an admirable Porthos will do a repeat, so will Leon Barry as Athos and Eugene Paulette as Aramis.

Nigel De Brulier, who was such a stunning Richelieu, is also returning to the Fairbanks fold.

Forty million people are going to be glad they own a radio on March 29. Those who haven't a radio can borrow the neighbor's for a chance of a lifetime is being offered to them by Joseph Schenck, who has arranged a United Artists hour. There will be no stuttering speeches of "I am so glad to be here—" lisped into an inoffensive microphone. The stars will really do and say something. Douglas Fairbanks will officiate as toastmaster and also plans to give a talk on athletics. Charlie Chaplin will recite a series of humorous anecdotes in various dialects. D. W. Griffith's speech will be based on love and marriage. John Barrymore will give the soliloquy from "Hamlet," with special music accompaniment. Norma Talmadge's portion will be a talk on "The New World Style Center." Dolores Del Rio will make her debut as a singer, with 'cello and violin accompaniment. Dodge Brothers will release this entertainment over the National Broadcasting Company's chain.

Someone, in a facetious moment, suggested that Warner Brothers could economise on "Noah's Ark" by engaging Lon Chaney to play all the characters, including Noah and the animals. But this idea came too late. Yesterday, Noah Beery and Louise Fazenda were added to the cast which already boasts of Dolores Costello. You might think that Noah Beery is going to play his namesake, but you are wrong. Noah is still among the unnamed. I wish Warners would have a heart and find somebody so all the prospective Noahs would stop telephoning me their names and addresses.

Pictures are going on in Hollywood. If you don't believe it, visit the studios. Matty Kemp, formerly with the Sennett Company, can now be located at Paramount, where he is playing in Florence Vidor's picture, directed by Harry D'Arrast. Shirley Palmer is elated over a new contract just given her by the Tiffany-Stahl Company for five years. You can't blame Shirley in the least for her next picture is "A Marriage of Tomorrow," by Raymond Schrock, and it gives her a chance to prove her ability. A chance is what many people are seeking here in Hollywood. Edythe Chapman, that fine actress who has been the mother of nearly everyone in films, is playing Colleen Moore's mother in "Heart to Heart." This, my children, is the latest title for "Tomorrow."

ST. PATRICK'S DANCE IN ODD FELLOWS HALL

A St. Patrick's dance will be held in Odd Fellows Hall, 1800 Sarah street, South Side, tonight. Music will be furnished by Joe Kaine's orchestra. The event will feature old-time dances. There will be a parade displaying the fashions of the nineties. Prizes will be awarded for the best costumes.

GIRL LOSES LEG, GETS $14,000

A consent verdict for $14,000 was rendered in Common Pleas Court yesterday in favor of Julia Paonessa and her father, Frank Paonessa, of Aspinwall, against the Pittsburgh Railways Company. The girl lost a leg by falling from the platform of a street car. She is to receive $8,000, the father $6,000. Attorney Thomas Hoffman represented the plaintiffs.

Charles Straitiff of Wilkinsburg, who sued the railways company for $20,000 for injuries received when his automobile collided with a street car, lost his case.

MISSION STREET BRIDGE CLOSED FOR REPAIRS

The Mission street east bridge, South Side, was ordered closed to traffic last night after an inspection made by the Department of Public Works, showed that a number of "gusset" plates must be replaced. It will take 10 days to make the repairs, which will cost approximately $1,000, it was said.

BUTLER ELOPERS UNCONCERNED

BUTLER, Pa., March 17.—Little concerned about their fate, Dorothy Campbell, 14, and Walter Wieland, 23, who eloped from Roxbury, Md., last Wednesday, are awaiting extradition to Maryland, where Wieland is wanted on a charge of abduction.

Dorothy says they can't convict Walter of the charge because she planned the "abduction," and she will stick to him to the end. "I was a willing party to the kidnaping," Dorothy told Sheriff J. F. Leslie. "My people might just as well let us get married as I will run away again," she said.

Maryland authorities have failed to communicate with the sheriff since he notified them of the capture of the pair near the Wieland home at Valencia. The sheriff said that he presumes requisition papers are being prepared and will arrive in a few days, but he does not intend to hold the young couple indefinitely. He expects some word today.

COSGRAVE SENDS THANKS TO IRISH

By WILLIAM T. COSGRAVE,

President of the Executive Council of the Irish Free State.

(Copyright, 1928, by International News Service.)

DUBLIN, March 17.—I am pleased to take the opportunity so kindly offered by The Sun-Telegraph, through International News Service, of again addressing their Irish readers on St. Patrick's Day.

I have this year had the opportunity of paying an official visit to the United States as a representative of the Irish Free State. I went to convey to the American government and the American people an expression of the gratitude and good will of the Irish people for their friendship and succor in the dark days now past.

The reception which was given me as Ireland's messenger has but added to our debt, for by courteous dignity and generous hospitality it was shown that the sentiments of our nation were reciprocated by your government and people.

In their self-reliant efforts to build a state worthy of our race, the Irish people deeply appreciate the sympathy and encouragement of the people of the United States.

I have been asked how Irish men and women in America can help. My answer is: By encouraging our trade with their adopted country and by giving their moral support to whatever government may be elected by the Irish people.

Today

Roman, Italian, French, Spanish, English, have used light wines and use them now. Michael Angelo at eighty wrote that he could not have continued his extremely difficult work without the good wine that a nephew sent. He drank plenty of it, several bottles a day.

WAGNER found that he could not work without wine. He tried vegetarianism and total abstinence. Both interfered with work. The founders of this country, Washington and Jefferson, drank wine. Jefferson imported his wines from France, and advocated no tax on light wine and beer.

BUT this country has decided to forbid the use of wine, making a patient, interesting experiment with bootleg whisky. There will be no official indorsement of wine, no change in the law forbidding it in this country, for many a year. Meanwhile here and there are oases. In California and some other states men that don't like bootleg whisky buy fifty gallons of grape juice for fifty cents a gallon, make two hundred full quarts of wine, enough to last a ar, for twenty-five dollars, cheaper than bootleg whisky.

Wife Won't Sew On Buttons, He Asks Divorce

His wife failed to sew buttons on his clothes and to care for him when he was ill, Edward R. Pluchel of 514 Foreland street, testified in his divorce action yesterday in Common Pleas Court. The wife, Mabel B. Pluchel, contesting the divorce, denied the accusations.

The husband said when he left his wife she had him brought into Desertion Court. When he showed that during his married life he had paid his wife from $30 to $150 a week, the Desertion Court did not find it necessary for him to pay his wife anything, but ordered that he give but $5 weekly for support of a child, he testified yesterday.

SIX VIEWERS NAMED IN STREET IMPROVEMENTS

Judge John A. Evans of Common Pleas Court has appointed E. Z. Smith, W. M. McJunkin and F. S. Haller viewers to adjudicate benefits and damages from the improvement of Virginia avenue and Chamber Place, Mt. Lebanon. He also named C. W. Reamer, R. M. Kopp and S. A. Merkel viewers to assess damages and benefits from improvements made to Taylor, Antietam, Standish, South Beatty, Joshua, Broadhead, Addison, Selwyn, Ludwick and Minor streets and Dorothy Place, Pittsburgh.

NAMED DEPUTY SEWICKLEY CONSTABLE

Don E. Batley, of 436 Green street, Sewickley, former chief of police of Sewickley, has been appointed a deputy constable by Judge Joseph M. Swearingen in Quarter Sessions Court. S. Y. McFarland, also a former chief of police of Sewickley, was elected constable in November and in December was elected paid chief of the fire department. He said his latter duties require that a deputy constable be named.

COLLIER'S says:

"Mr. Ross Crane at the Chicago Art Institute proclaims the place of beauty in everyday life and the very tangible relation between art and democracy. He intersperses his talks on house planning with city beautiful, planting shubbery and what to do with the spare room. He builds up a room before your eyes, telling you why the davenport goes here and not somewhere else. Mr. Crane possesses the rare gift of being delightfully entertaining while instructing."

WHO'S WHO says:

"Architect, decorator, writer, lecturer; Educational Director American Homes Bureau; formerly Director Extension Department The Art Institute of Chicago; founder of the National Better Homes Movement; originator of "Dramatizations of Interior Decoration" as a means for creating interest in home-furnishing; Interior Decoration Editor Better Homes and Garden Magazine; "The Ross Crane Book of Home Furnishing and Decoration," officially adopted by The General Federation of Women's Clubs as their study book on Interior Decoration."

ROSS CRANE

Founder of the National Better Homes Movement, and Leading Interior Decorating Authority

IT IS OUR privilege to place at the disposal of the people of Pittsburgh the services of this outstanding interior decorating authority, for one week, beginning Monday, without expense or obligation. Mr. Crane will be here to assist and advise with spring home-furnishing plans and to help with individual decorating problems.

He will be supplemented by the entire staff of our Interior Decorating Studios—the largest in Pittsburgh; together with the experienced and competent sales-force of our Furniture, Drapery, Rug, China, Glassware, Lamps, Linen, Wall Paper, Housewares, Bed Coverings and Silverware and other home-furnishing departments. No Pittsburgh housewife should lack for inspiration, information or help in the arranging and furnishing of her house, with such an array of talent at her command.

Twice Daily

Mr. Crane will speak twice daily, morning and afternoon, except Monday, when he will speak only in the afternoon.

The Information You Want

Mr. Crane's talks are practical in the extreme, and are accompanied by visual demonstrations of the decorative points and ideas which he offers. Each lecture is illustrated by the actual furnishings of a room. Mr. Crane is not only an artist but also an entertaining speaker, and his talks hold the attention of an audience aside from the interest of the subject.

A Complete Home-Furnishing Course

During the 11 lectures, arranged for the coming week, Mr. Crane will cover practically every phase of the subject of modern home-furnishings. They are designed for the woman who is her own decorator, and scaled to the proportions of the average American home. The series of lectures will constitute a complete course in interior decorations, and those who know the high position occupied by Mr. Crane in the field of modern decorations will plan to attend the entire series.

PRINCE ISMAIL

Prince Ismail, noted New York Indian mystic and philosopher, in full regalia, demonstrates with Miss Essie Moore, prominent actress, how Nancy Ann Miller, American girl, renounced Christianity to accept Brahmanism so that she could marry the former Maharajah of Indore today.

COMPLETE ABSOLUTION

In this manner, Miss Miller was granted absolution by holy anointment, known as purification of the soul, and had to indicate that she understood and accepted the Hindu teachings. In the photo to the left, she gives her final renunciation of Christianity and western ideas over burning sandalwood oil. Note how Indian costumes were used.

BETROTHED

Miss Miller and the former Maharajah of Indore, whose bride she is now eligible to become. The prince could not have married outside his faith.

MYSTERIES EXPLAINED

The mysteries of the world's oldest religion are explained to the convert who is also told the symbolism of the holy mark and other secrets.

GREATEST BLESSING

The blessing of the highest priest of the church is bestowed upon the convert in closing the ceremony. At the Miller conversion, the girl was anointed in the holy river near Bombay while thousands of Hindus looked on. Members of the faith in some cases objected that an outsider be admitted and considered it sacrilege.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Brides to Vie With Roses in Helping June Live Up to Reputation

FROM all appearances, June is going to live up to its reputation and stand sponsor to quite a few weddings. Already one girl has announced a date in that month—Katherine Marsh, you remember, having set June 16 for her marriage to William Clark Fuellhart. And now another has been named, just a week later. It is that of Eleanor Lovelace Winter, daughter of Mrs. Frederick W. Winter, of Beechwood boulevard, who is to marry John Birge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Root Birge, of Schenectady, N. Y., on June 23. Eleanor, you know, is a Rosemary Hall girl, and later she attended Smith College.

Another engagement of interest here is announced today in the betrothal of Marion Beeson to Alexander Verner Wasson, son of Judge Henry Grant Wasson, of Devonshire street. Marion, you recall, is the daughter of Charles Edmund Beeson, of Morewood avenue.

White Sulphur Springs, in West Virginia, has already attracted a lot of Pittsburghers this season. Now, I understand, the Edward William Gwinners and their daughter, Sara Louise of Fifth avenue, have come north from Ormond Beach and have joined the local colony at the Springs. The Gwinners spent some time cruising in the West Indies before they went to Ormond Beach.

Also, I hear that Emil Winters, of Beechwood boulevard, has engaged Casino Cottage at the Springs for April 12.

The William Boyds, of Pois place, Sewickley, got back home early this week from Nassau, where they spent about two weeks. A number of other Sewickleyans have returned home from the East or the South. Among them are Miss Martha Porter and Miss Mary Cree Porter, of Peebles street, who were in New York and Philadelphia for about 10 days and returned to the Valley on Thursday. And the Martin Moores and their son, Martin, Jr., got back from the East on Thursday and are visiting Mrs. Frank R. Stoner, of Beaver road. Mr. and Mrs. George P. Rose and their daughter, Lillian, of Thorne street, are getting back today from Augusta, Ga., I believe. You remember, of course, that the Roses' other daughter, Mrs. Sara Rose Frick, was married last Saturday in Augusta to James William Benning, Jr., of Canada.

Another visitor in the East is Miss Abbie Christy, of Frederick avenue, who left on Tuesday to spend 10 days with friends in New York.

Members of the Girls' Club of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Sewickley are planning to hold a cabaret and bazar Saturday evening, April 21, in the recreation room of the parish house. There is to be an orchestra for dancing, I hear, and the girls are to entertain their guests with many varied dancing and singing acts. Supper will be served during the evening.

Mrs. James Barlow Cullum, Jr., is president of the club and is serving as chairman of the entertainment committee. Then the publicity for the affair is in the hands of Elizabeth Hays, and she is handling the sale of tickets, too. Mrs. Helen Sieerman Williams is in charge of the decorations and music, while the bazar is in charge of Mrs. Raymond Ganner and Mrs. Oscar Rosenfeldt. Mrs. Gertrude Wirsing will be in charge of refreshments.

A wedding date just announced is that of Sara Eleanore Thorp, daughter of the Charles Monroe Thorp, of Maple avenue, Edgewood, who will be married to William Forker Whitla, son of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Whitla, of Sharon, on Saturday, April 21. The ceremony is to be performed in the Community Presbyterian Church of Edgewood.

The Halbert K. Hitchcocks, of Bartlett street, are in New York, I hear. They are at the St. Regis Hotel.

An informal tea is being held this afternoon by Anne and Marie Nevin in their home in Chestnut street, Sewickley. They are entertaining for their young cousin, Adelaide Russell, who has just lately returned to Sewickley from Europe.

Mrs. Benjamin Shuker, retiring worthy matron of Allan Chapter, O. E. S., entertained at luncheon in Webster Hall today for her officers and past matrons of the chapter.

The Women's Aid, Allegheny Division, Pennsylvania Railroad, will hold a benefit card party Tuesday afternoon in Oppenheim-Collins' auditorium.

Miss Helen E. Costello, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Costello, of Westfield avenue, Beechview, has chosen April 25 as the date for her marriage to William C. McClelland, son of William McClelland, of this city.

Aspinwall Chapter No. 142, O. E. S., is to hold an old-time dance next Friday night in the Eastern Star Hall, Aspinwall. Mrs. Inez M. Alexander is chairman of the dance and Mrs. Dora Dyson is in charge of cards.

WEDS HER HINDU

NANCY MILLER MARRIED IN 18 RITES

all over with a saffron pigment and his bare feet were yellow with ochre. Fresh clothing was given to him for the ceremony. As he departed for the altar many people fell at his feet as a signal of affection.

18 RITES IN MARRIAGE

There were 18 separate marriage rites before the nuptial ceremony was ended. At its conclusion the assembled guests broke into cheers, bugles were sounded and drums beaten. The elephants, excited by the uproar, joined the din, trumpeting loudly.

After the incantations by the priests the veil that had been placed between the bride and groom was withdrawn signifying that they took each other for husband and wife. Then the bride, her arms filled with flowers, leaned forward and placed a garland upon her new husband's head.

After the ceremonial of the garland the bride and groom retired to don their bridal robes for the rite of the sacred fire. This part of the ritual was to register the marriage vows in the eyes of the god of fire. It was the final one of the 18 rites.

START AT 2 IN MORNING

Preliminaries to the Hindoo marriage began at 2 o'clock this morning in the palace at Barwaha.

In the middle of the night Miss Miller was aroused by a woman servant and told to dress in ceremonial robes. She was then led to an altar where she was admitted into the Dhangar caste, which placed her an an equality of caste with her husband. Tall candles sputtered upon the altar cloth and moonshine streamed through the high castle windows as the priest droned through the service of elevating the American girl to the caste of her husband.

Following the ceremony there was a pre-nuptial feast for the women of the Dhangar caste. After the former Maharajah had partaken of food it was placed upon another plate and passed among the women, who ate some of it.

MADE MAHARANNE

Before the actual marriage service, which did not begin until sunset this evening, Miss Miller, or Devi Sharmishta, according to her Hindu name, was adopted into the Holkar family. After the priests had invoked the blessing of the gods upon the convert the title of Her Highness Maharanne Sharmishthabai was conferred upon her. The former Maharajah's family received the bride warmly. Miss Miller wore a cloth of gold headdress and a brilliant magenta saree.

Barwaha has been converted into a city of Arabian Nights splendor. The houses are decorated and banners floated lazily in the hot sunshine. A haze of dust, kicked up by the sandals of the natives, hung low over the narrow streets.

Announcement was made that, following the marriage, the ex-Maharajah and his wife will go to the city of Indore, capital of the native states. After a brief visit they will leave for Europe, where the princess will undergo an operation for appendicitis. She has been suffering from this ailment, but her condition was not sufficiently serious to demand an immediate operation.

RECEIVE BEAUTIFUL GIFTS

Friends and relatives of the former Maharajah and his American bride contributed many beautiful gold and silver gifts. The jungle near the nuptial altar was decked with bright flowers and gaily colored bunting.

Miss Miller, as the moment for the nuptial ceremony approached, knelt in worshipful attitude before the idol Devi Couri, for she must worship idols now that she has renounced Christianity for the Hindu faith. A diamond and pearl garland glistened upon her chestnut colored hair. There were green bangles upon her arms and diamond rings upon her toes.

Her anklets were of pure beaten gold. Around her waist she wore an emerald band decorated with two lion's mouths studded with rubies.

Unable to wear the traditional nose ring, Miss Miller had a special one made for her. It was wrought of gold and crusted with diamonds and pearls. It was equipped with a fastening clasp at the nostrils so that the nose would not have to be pierced.

BRIDAL NECKLACE CHEAP

In contrast with the mighty fortune in gold, silver and precious jewels seen at the ceremony was the ceremonial neckless of black beads. However rich the marrying couple may be this necklace is always of the cheapest character which can be bought for a couple of shillings in any bazar. After this necklace is fastened the couple are declared man and wife "in the eyes of the gods and all mankind." Then follows the reception, the feasting and the gorgeous fireworks.

As sunset approached the former Maharajah walked to the sacred Shamiana, near the royal palace where the marriage altar was erected. He led a gorgeously dressed procession, whose splendors dazzled the imagination. Three elephants and 20 camels bedecked with silk and velvet robes and carrying gilded howdahs that flashed in the dying sunset, carried some of the visitors.

THOUSANDS SEE CEREMONY

Thousands of spectators, including the nobility and aristocracy of Indore, had gathered in front of the sacred Shamiana, where they stood with bowed heads as the elephants and camels trudged by kicking up clouds of dust.

Miss Miller was waiting in a silken tent. As the former Maharajah was led to this tent the nearest spectators nodded their heads in obeisance. The Indian Prince's head and shoulders were covered with garlands of freshly-plucked flowers. His bared feet were smeared with red ochre. He was accompanied by a band of native musicians who beat upon their drums and blew loudly upon their trumpets.

The Holkars, the family of the bridegroom, is one of the oldest and wealthiest in the central Indian state of Indore. In accordance with its high caste it has its own deity and its own shrine, the latter being situated at Khandobi. The ex-Maharajah owns vast estates and has an immense income.

BEST IN PITTSBURGH ... RDAY, MARCH 17, 1928 SEVEN

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

FISTIC fans in Pittsburgh and elsewhere who are sticklers for clean boxing are hopeful that the New York commission's stand against clinching, as announced recently by Commissioner William Muldoon, will have the desired effect of paving the way for a general movement to rid the glove game of this marring custom.

William Muldoon.

Clinching and resulting petting parties have done much to lessen the popularity of the Queensbery sport. Patrons who pay to see real boxing are entitled to more for their money than an exhibition of a couple of supposed fighters waltzing through a tiresome bout with their arms repeatedly locked. Such affairs have driven more than one good customer away from the game here and elsewhere.

IN NEW YORK referees and judges have been instructed to be influenced in their decisions in favor of the boxer who does not clinch or hug or cling to one or both of his opponent's arms. The man who refrains from clinching and shows an inclination to fight in the open will be favored above an opponent who is less scrupulous about obeying the rules.

Muldoon says that the clinching boxer will be discredited in every official act of the commission and its representatives.

If this plan does not result in cleaner and better bouts, New York referees in the future will be given authority to "Throw the offender or offenders" out of the ring after a third warning.

REALLY, no special rule of the kind is needed to cover the offense of clinching. All that is necessary is to enforce the Marquis of Queensbery rules, which were written way back in 1865 to rid the boxing game of brutality and to put a premium on science and cleverness. The second rule in that code says "No wrestling or hugging allowed."

Boxing authorities in this country have been lax in enforcing that regulation. Great Britain has been much stricter in demanding that the Queensbery rules be enforced.

Bob Quinn.

A notable demonstration of the way boxers are drilled there was given by Jimmy Wilde, when he came to this country after the World War and while he still held the flyweight championship.

IT WAS a treat to watch the clean and workmanlike movements of Wilde in the ring. He was a real mechanic and never made a false move.

When the rules are enforced a boxer has no right to touch an opponent with his hands except for

ABILITY and incentive, prime essentials to the success of any sports competition, will not be wanting tonight when the Pirate hockey sextet battles the Boston Bruins at Duquesne Garden.

Even should the Pirates falter and fail, ability will be in evidence, for the Bruins are the personification of smashing, bruising, battering hockey power. By subduing the Hawks, 2-1, at Chicago Thursday night, the Boston skaters clinched the championship of the American Group, and they will be merely tuning up for the play-off series for the Stanley cup, emblematic of the world's championship, as they oppose the Bucs tonight.

An opportunity to get into third place is the incentive which will prompt the Pirates to give their all from the first minute to the last. Detroit at present holds the coveted position, as a result of nosing out the Canadiens, 1-0, [illegible] night, but the locals can even the score by humbling the Bostonians. Detroit's lead is in part due to the fact that the Cougars have played one more game than have the Bucs, and should the locals win all of

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

DUQUESNE HIGH is champion of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Association in basketball—very much so. Last night, before a capacity audience numbering almost 3,500 persons, Coach Henry's superb quint played circles around New Castle, defending champion, letting it out with only two field goals, and winning by a 42 to 13 count.

New Castle was completely outclassed. Kowallis, Duke forward, with the excellent co-operation of his teammates, netted no less than eight baskets by himself, with the remainder of the quint scoring one apiece at least. The record of Kowallis is all the more remarkable when it is remembered he also accounted for four out of five fouls. He stands out as the tourney's star.

Duquesne completely shut out New Castle in the first half in the matter of field goals, and permitted only one in each of the two remaining quarters. Ostrosky and Reider got those two.

It has been a long time since a better passing quint has been seen around here. It is fast and always alert. Coach Henry has provided a variety of plays that keeps the opposition always in a whirl whether on the offensive or defensive.

The score might have been closer and some of New Castle's long shots counted, and many of them rimmed the basket and fell out again. Duquesne's defensive was too strong for the Bridenbaugh boys to break through to take pot shots at the basket, and its offensive too fast, usually, to give its slower opponents time to get a defense set.

The Dukes led 10-2, in the first quarter, 24-6 in the second, 36-10 in the third and scored five to three points in the final period.

Duquesne next will play in the Grove City College elimination tourney, after which it hopes to compete in the state final round at State College.

REGULARS LOSE 11-7 TO SEAL TEAM

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 17.—The Pirates will help San Francisoc celebrate St. Patrick's Day by taking on the Seals this afternoon at Recreation Park here.

The contest will be the first of 14 battles with the three Coast League clubs of the Bay district, the Seals, the Missions and Oakland. The entire squad of Pirates reached this city late last night. The first team spent the afternoon in taking a trimming at the hands of the Seals at their Monterey training camp. Hal Rhyne and his mates hammered out a victory by the score of 11 to 7. Five homers marked the contest, the whole thing being a reminder of a daily battle in the Baker Bowl at Philadelphia.

Rhyne was not the only former Pirate to help to encompass the defeat of the Buccaneers. Elmer Jacobs and Buckshot May, two pitchers who did duty for the freebooters, were on the mound for the Seals. Jacobs worked cleverly against the big-leaguers, performing the remarkable trick of fanning the Waner boys in the same inning.

FIVE HOMERS MADE

Three of the five circuit swats were made by the home players, Johnson hitting for the distance twice and Donovan once. Wright and Traynor poled the ball over the ramparts for the Bucs.

Johnson was the leading hitter of the day, connecting for four safe blows. All of the homers went sailing over the left field fence.

Barnhart kicked in with a costly error in the first inning that helped the Seals start out on their scoring rampage, and then later in the game, Pie Traynor came through with a couple miscues that didn't help the Pirate cause any.

Wright's homer was the most potent of the day, as there were two of his mates on the sacks when Glenn slammed one of May's heaves over the wall.

VINCE DUNDEE WINS

HOLLYWOOD, March 17.—Vince Dundee, Baltimore Italian welter, took a 10-round decision from Pete August, of New Haven at the Hollywood Legion Stadium last night. Dundee has won three fights in a row, being defeated once by Jackie Fields, since coming to the Pacific coast.

JUSTICE F OUT OF HANDICAP

SAN DIEGO, March 17.—(AP.)—Justice F., future book favorite for the rich Coffroth handicap to be decided at the Ti Juana racetrack Sunday, has been definitely declared out of the race by H. C. (Doc) Riddle, trainer of the English-bred colt.

Riddle said that although he had worked hard applying poultices to the sore leg, which "went out" on Justice F. in a trial race Wednesday, his efforts were unavailing.

Tony Pascuma, who was scheduled to ride Justice F., in the Coffroth, will pilot Cantankerous of the Greenfield Farm, instead. This withdrawal leaves the Three D. stable's Handy Mandy the favorite.

Carlson Asks to Teach

By JESS CARVER.

DR. H. C. CARLSON, coach of the University of Pittsburgh basketball team, undefeated national champions, has been invited to assist Howard Jones head coach of football at the University of Southern California and Bill Roper, Princeton grid mentor, with a summer coaching school at Wisconsin State Teachers' College, Superior, Wis., during the coming summer.

Recognized as one of the leading basketball coaches of the country, Dr. Carlson will be in full charge of the basketball training, and will assist Jones and Roper with the gridiron instruction. The course will be of three weeks' duration.

In a statement to the Sun-Telegraph last night, Dr. Carlson indicated that he would accept the offer, provided Pitt does not carry out a rumored intention of conducting a coaching school of its own, in which case, the genial Doc will teach the cage game here.

Dr. Carlson recieved a telegram yesterday from Jones, in which the Southern California coach congratulated the Panther mentor on the success attained by his team during the past cage campaign and urged that he accept the Wisconsin offer.

MID-ATLANTIC SCHEDULE OK.

The schedule for the 1928 season of the Middle Atlantic Baseball League will consist of 126 playing dates, and has been officially adopted by the league officials. The scheduled was given the O. K. at a meeting in the Hotel Henry yesterday.

Johnstown's delegates to the meeting forced several changes to be made in the original schedule before passing on it, and won eight Saturday and holiday dates, in the place of the four originally awarded the town.

The opening games will be played at Scottdale, with Cumberland as the visiting team; at Fairmont, Clarksubrg opposing; at Johnstown, with Jeannette in the Flood City and at Wheeling with Charleroi invading.

The delegates in attendance were: M le Bean, Johnstown; S. Q. King, Scottdale; Alec Pisola, Scottdale; S. L. Woodward, Charleroi; J. W. Bugher, Jeannette; Fred L. Derringer, Fairmont; T. B. Cain, Clarksburg; C. A. Hodge, Wheeling; J. W. McGuire, Cumberland.

CHILLY SAUCE BY CHILLY DOYLE

Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Mar. 17.—Babe Pinelli says he is tickled to be back in the Coast League. The fighting Italian apparently delights in playing ball among the home folks and Babe, perhaps, wishes to be close to the well-known Mr. Giannini Bank of Italy fame.

Pinelli is said to have made a fortune in this stock in the past year. Remy Kremer and Pete Scott, two Californians with the Pirates, also have added to their worldly riches by speculating in the same stock.

HAL RHYNE was allowed to leave the National League, despite a shortage of good infielders on the rosters of several clubs. Hal seems to have more ability than some of the athletes who will perform this year. Boston and Philadelphia, in particular, might have found use for Rhyne. Hal is extremely popular on the coast.

WHEN Glenn Wright came to the bat this afternoon, a good-natured fan shouted, asking Wright how he was able to beat out the Seals' star shortstop.

"You're pretty good," said the fan as Glenn smiled. Then Buckshot stepped into the box and hit the rocket over the fence, to clinch the argument.

RIGHTFIELDER JOLLEY of the Seals, probably would be a sure-fit hit, if the Phillies would nab him for their band box park. Jolley is as big as Cy Williams and his left-hand swing is just as vicious. He batted .397 last season.

DUTCH REUTHER is another familiar figure with the Seals. Dutch apparently has more stuff than many of the big league southpaws, but he was allowed to get out of the majors. Reuther, however, is said to be drawing a princely sum for playing with the Seals.

ERWIN BRAME and George Peery, two of the most promising of Bush's younger crop of sharpshooters, found the Coast Leaguers a real problem. Nick Williams has gathered together a promising club, more than one member of Nick's team being able to smear the ball.

BRAME was given ragged support and Peery was not backed up in championship fashion. The big righthander from Jersey City was found for three runs in four innings. Peery worked the last four rounds and was nicked for eight tallies.

THE day was ideal for the sport and a crowd of 2,000 turned out to see the major leaguers in action against the coast boys. Manager Bush announced this morning that he would use Hill, Grimes and Tauscher against the Seals this afternoon.

Ellsworth Quits Race

MAINE, Ariz., March 17.—Although suffering from a pulled heel tendon, Arthur Newton, the Rhodesia rambler, continued to set the pace today in C. C. Pyle's cross-country marathon race. Newton said that he was forced to adopt a sprinting stride to alleviate his suffering yesterday, and that he feared the strain entailed might prove a severe handicap later in the race, but he started with the rest of the field on the 37-mile hike to Flagstaff today.

The number of contestants now remaining in the race now is well below 100. One of the latest to withdraw is Rodney V. Ellsworth of Monongahela, Pa., who left the race yesterday after suffering shin splints.

DAMON RUNYON SAYS

Damon Runyon

NEW YORK, March 17.—"Call for Mister Dempsey!"

"Call for Mr. Dempsey!" Hark!—

'Tis the low-pitched, pleading voice of Mr. George Tex Rickard, the pugilistic entrepreneur, like unto the gentle mooing of a rhinocerros calling to its mate. I do not like to say I told you so, my friends, but did I not tell you so? Did I not tell you that Mr. Rickard would wind up, hat in hand, on the doorstep of the old Manassa man mauler? I did. And there Mr. Rickard is.

His elimination tournaments have certainly accomplished their purpose. They have eliminated one and all. They have practically eliminated the elimination, which is eliminating to the nth degree, as we say in the gymnasium.

And what have you got? You've got magnolia?

After the soiree at Madison Square Garden the other night between the terrible Sharkey man, who was a little more terrible than somewhat, and the rousting, jousting Johnny Risko, Mr. Rickard went into a back room and began studying up some elocutionary phrases. He figures he can use 'em when he meets the train that will bring Jack Dempsey to this city in about a week.

For Mr. Rickard is confronted by the task of persuading Jack Dempsey that those eyes are not as bad as the doctor says, and that he might as well risk one of them anyway in a third and probably final bout with Mr. Gene Tunney. I am inclined to think that what Mr. Rickard will show Jack Dempsey will be a cure for sore eyes.

IT IS an even money bet that Dempsey will grab that last gob of gravy. He has discovered that he can always use a little bit more. I think you will find that his apparent reluctance to battle again is founded largely on business motives. He is waiting to make Mr. Rickard jack that ante up.

And what a spot the old Manassa man mauler is in just now! He is the only man in the country, bar one, who can insure a better-than-a million gate to Mr. Rickard in a bout with Mr. Tunney. The other man, as I have remarked before, is your little pal, Senor Paolino Oo-scray Umbray, the Beezark of the Basque.

Of course Dempsey is to be preferred as a drawing attraction with Mr. Tunney to the Beezark, but I put the latter very close to him for this particular bout. Against anyone else the Beezark isn't a tremendous draw. Against Tunney the pugilistic proletariat would allot him only an outside chance, but the clients would feel assured of a rip-snorting bout.

Mr. Rickard has tried to decry my Oo-scray theory, but he knows I am right. You see, Oo-scray ran out of Mr. Rickard's elimination tournament, eliminating himself, so to speak, which was lese majeste, or something like that. Hence, Mr. Rickard stopped speaking to the Beezark's interpreter, because, of course, he couldn't speak to the Beezark if he wished. Moreover, Mr. Rickard pooh-poohed and tush-tushed the Beezark. But Mr. Rickard is a showman, and he knows what Mr. Tunney and the Beezark would draw.

HOWEVER, I wouldn't call Mr. Rickard a showman if he tries to inveigle the Beezark back to battle Joe Doaks, or Who-Struck-John, or anyone else, because in that event he might only eliminate the Beezark all over again. The Beezark has been eliminated so often that it is no longer any novelty, and lacking Jack Dempsey, Mr. Rickard might just as well go ahead and sign Mr. Tunney and the Beezark.

And, if you ask me, I doubt that Mr. Tunney would care to mingle with the Beezark if he could get any of the others, beginning with Jack Dempsey. Mr. Tunney keeps sufficiently in touch with the boxing dodge to realize that the Beezark is a fellow with a style that would cause him plenty of trouble over a route.

I still insist that Mr. Rickard made his greatest error in sticking to that batch of heavyweights that he kept foisting on the clients time and again instead of giving some of the youngsters a chance. For instance, Knute Hansen can lick most of that bunch without half trying, but they tossed Knute around without giving him a chance at the alleged top notchers in the Garden that he finally took plenty of air and went in for writing letters.

I believe Knute is now abroad, newly married, and I doubt if we will see his smiling pan in these parts again for some time to come. It is all a big laugh when as good a heavyweight as Hansen is out of work, and those cab drivers are getting big money in the Garden.

THERE was another heavyweight around here a few months ago that I guarantee could lick Mr. Rickard's entire covey of eliminatees, or whatever you call 'em, one after the other, fighting one a night every night for a week. His name is of no importance now. A white man and plenty wealthy.

None of Mr. Rickard's first-line heavies would fight him. They all fairly shuddered at his name. Mr. Rickard did not assist his cause, and he, too, faded from view.

Had Mr. Rickard persevered with the youngsters and disregarded the fact that they might not draw in the beginning he might now have an Armand Emanuel or a Joe Sekyra or a Knute Hansen towering over the others as a potential contender. He has overlooked a mighty good bet in that Englishman, Phil Scott, and in Pierre Charles, the Belgian.

Soggy Field Aids Champs

By TOM BIRKS.

WITH Heidelberg and the Pittsburgh Rovers reported fit as the proverbial fiddle all soccer roads should lead to the Westinghouse High School stadium today where the final of the Western Pennsylvania cup will be played.

On the eve of the season's greatest classic both managers Balsarini of Heidelberg and McGlurg of the Rovers were supremely confident that their outfits were ready to go the fastest 90 minutes of soccer staged this season.

The heavy fall of snow through yesterday afternoon and last night has made the amateur champions favorites to cop the title. The green and gold eleven has been invincible for many years on a heavy field and all indications point to the field being such today.

On the other hand, the break is against the Rovers. Followers of the Lawrenceville club felt that given a fast field the wearers of the white and black would stop Heidelberg for the first time in a cup final. However there is a chance that the snow will not become soggy and should it keep fast, a wonderful exhibition should be on tap.

Evans is sure to lead the attack for the Rovers with Buff Donnelli, Duquesne's grid captain-elect playing the pivot position for the champions.

The game is scheduled to start at 2.30 p. m. George Brannigan will officiate.

Tomorrow all local soccerdom will watch the efforts of Swissvale in the Western semi-final of the national amateur cup, meeting the Magyars who eliminated Heidelberg in the last round at Cleveland.

NOTES of the BOXERS

JACK BARRY, who has not boxed here for some time, will be welcomed back to the Motor Square ring up his large following Monday night when he meets Jackie Murray, Negro welterweight, in the semi-final of the carded four eight-round bouts with Willie Davies and Young Chappie clashing in the eight-round finale. Barry has been boxing frequently in Erie and other towns, and has been a consistent winner, and his general form is greatly improved over what it was when he last boxed here.

Pete Zivic and Lou Moscowitz meet in their return bout of 10 rounds in New York tonight. Pete knocked out Lou in the first round two weeks ago, shortly after Moscowitz had stopped Allentown Johnny Leonard, Pete's stablemate, in the first round.

Three local amateur boxers, A. Iovina, Tom Harris and Lee Kyburski will compete in a show at Buffalo tonight.

THE positions of leaders in the singles and doubles in the annual tournament of the original Southern Duckpin Association, which closes on the Forward Alleys today, will be endangered as a host of local and out-of-town pinmen attack the high scores set in the past four days of competition. There is little chance of the five-men team leaders, the Weurthele quintet, with its 2,652 score, being displaced, however.

The singles lead changed hands yesterday once, F. Obley toppling the maples for a 618 score to displace Pulford and his 606. The latter is still safely entrenched in second place. A. Bissi forged into a tie for fourth, with Casper with a 596. Palmer still holds third with 597.

In the doubles, John and Bill Casper still hold sway with 1,118, and Meader and Steadman are still tagging along in second place, a pin behind the leaders.

Eight new teams rolled into the first 25 yesterday, the duo, composed of Bloskis and Richards, being high with 1,109, are today in third place. The only team to drop out of the first 15 was Ambridge.

KANSAS CITY, March 17.—(AP.)—Favorites from the East and Middlewest generally were off form in the American Bowling Congress here yesterday, permitting dark horse entries to take most of the honors.

Joe Willman, 22-year-old Chicago bowler, was the only one to take over first position in any of the four classes. He rolled 1,895 to head the all-events, displacing Buck Flint, also of Chicago, who held the leadership since Sunday last, with 1,880.

In last night's five-men competition, the Roberts No. 1 team of Detroit shot 2,924 to move into second place. The Spartans of New York led 14 teams from that city with 2,936 to place fourth. The Burlington Route Five of Chicago took over fifth place in this event with 2,901.

The Dwyers, another favorite New York entry, with such stars as Barney Spinella, all-event champion, and Joe Falcaro, were off form, shooting only 2,779. Spinella rolled 160-187-201—548, while Falcaro had 176-175-156—507.

In the doubles, Gutman and Planer of Milwaukee went into third place with 1,218 and H. Rice and J. Kehm of Fort Dodge, Ia., placed fourth with 1,217.

Chicago was awarded the 1929 tournament at the annual congress convention yesterday. James A. Wilson of New York was elected president, succeeding A. J. Baxter, Huntington, W. Va.

CHICAGO, March 17.—(AP.)—Ralph Greenleaf of Philadelphia had won his way to within one notch of the pocket billiard title again today, needing only one more victory to gain at least a tie for the title he won last year but lost in subsequent play. Frank Taberski of Schenectady, the champion, was to play both Greenleaf and Erwin Rudolph of Chicago in today's matches, needing both games to make his title secure.

Taberski and Rudolph were down for the second matinee game, the first bringing together Andrew Ponzi of Philadelphia and Peter Durocher of Chicago.

Taberski and Greenleaf meet tonight in the game on which hangs the title. If Rudolph tumbles Taberski, then Greenleaf and Taberski will go into the final match on even terms, each with seven victories and one defeat. If Taberski wins the afternoon match with Rudolph, then Greenleaf must beat the champion to win, and beat him again in a playoff match to follow at once for the title.

KARPENSKI NEW SKATE CHAMP

Mitchie Karpenski wrested the state skating championship for men from John Deni and Helen Gaynor retained her women's title in the annual state and scholastic speed skating meet at Duquesne Garden last night.

Karpenski won his title by winning the 440, half mile and finishing second in the three mile event. The latter race was marred, as were several others during the program, by a foul. John Deni has been recommended for a two-year suspension as a result of his deliberate fouling of Zigmund Karpenski, brother of the new champion, in this event. There was trouble between the Karpenski brothers and Deni and his partner, Sam Abbot, throughout the evening.

Helen Gaynor made a clean sweep of all the events in her class.

In the scholastic events, Peabody pulled out victor, mainly by virtue of some fine skating on the part of Tom Coulter. Coulter won both the 220 and the 440-yard races. The other Peabody skaters, Belstein and Price, won the 220 short skate and 440-yard short skate reces, respectively.

NELSON AND GRIFFIN IN HANDBALL FINAL

CLEVELAND, March 17.—(AP.)—George Nelson of Baltimore, the defending champion, and Joe Griffin of Detroit, will play handball for the A. A. U. title today. This pairing is a repetition of the finals for the national Y. M. C. A. single championship, won by Griffin in Detroit recently.

Nelson won his semi-final match against Joe Bathey, Detroit, 21-11, 17-21, 21-9. Griffin licked Al Hobelman, Nelson's doubles teammate from Baltimore, in straight games, 21-8, 21-14, to win his way into the final bracket.

Joe Gourdeau and Sam Berko, Cleveland, earned the right to compete for the doubles title by beating Lorenzo Clawson and Max Foote, Salt Lake City, 21-18, 21-11.

Smith, health officer. Requests to churches temporarily to suspend Sunday school also were withdrawn. Dr. F. E. Coughlin, epidemilogist of the State Department of Health, conferred with officials regarding the scarlet fever situation in Erie.

HOCKEY

their remaining five games they could not get worse than a tie for the last play-off and pay-o[illegible]th. In downing the Canadiens Detroit did nothing other than make a Pittsburgh victory absolutely essential.

Many local fans will regret the Pirates' seeming misfortune in drawing Boston as a foe at such a critical stage in the race. Pittsburgh-Boston rivalry ever has been most keen, and their profound hatred for the Bucs undoubtedly will prompt the Bruins to do their best to put the locals out of the running. Many clubs, were they entrenched in first place as are the Bruins, might show a little consideration for a foe that was perilously near elimination, but the only consideration that can be expected from the Hub heavyweights is a desire to make the locals' demise quick and painless. Whenever they meet the Bruins, the best the Bucs can expect is the worst.

The season series between the Pirates and the Bears now is even, each winning once and three games ending in scoreless deadlocks. In their last meeting here the Bucs triumphed by 1-0, and they are primed to repeat. The members of the local starting lineup are in the pink of condition, and with Drury and White flanking McCaffrey, the reserve front line packs a punch that demands respect. McKinnon, paired with Burke on the defense in the last two games, will carry much of the burden. When two clubs score only three goals in five games, as have the Pirates and Bruins, it is obvious that the guardians are doing most of the work.

The probable lineup:

Pirates.		Boston.
Worters	G	Winkler
McKinnon	D	Hitchman
Burke	D	Shore
Milks	C	Frederickson
Darragh	W	Oliver
Cotton	W	Galbraith

Pirate spares—McCaffrey, Drury, White, McKinnon and Smith. Boston spares—Connor, Gainer, Gordon, Clapper, Harrington. Time of game—8:30 o'clock.

LEES' TO HEAD SHARON NINE

One of the best semi-pro clubs in the district, with George Lees, the former Green Cab catcher, managing the playing activities, is going to operate in Sharon this season.

Plans have been under way for considerable time and quite a number of stars have been approached in the makeup of the club. Hollis Cannon, the portsider from the Erie club of the P. & O. League, will be on the roster.

Thomson, a Sharon boy, will play first base, with Heinie Boll covering the keystone sack.

The new club will play Sunday ball and bring the best attractions.

EAST PITTSBURGH BOY SIGNS WITH GENERALS

GREENSBURG, Pa., March 17.—Joseph Kareis, a right-handed pitcher of East Pittsburgh, has been added to the staff of the Greensburg Generals in the Pennsylvania League. He formerly pitched for a team in an industrial league in that section.

FLOWERS WINS TORRID BOUT

NEW YORK, March 17.—(AP.)—Bruce Flowers, sensational Negro lightweight of New Rochelle, N. Y., battered out a 10-round victory over Billy Petrolle, the Fargo Express, in the feature event of a lightweight carnival at Madison Square Garden last night. Flowers scaled 135, two pounds more than Petrolle.

Eddie (Cannonball) Martin, once king of the bantamweights, won a 10-round decision over Davey Abad of Panama in the semi-final. The weights were, Martin 126; Abad 124½.

Abad, one of the few boys to win a decision over Tony Canzoneri, featherweight champion, barely lasted the limit under Martin's short-armed bullish attack.

ALLISON AND BELL REACH SEMI-FINAL

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 17.—(AP.)—Wilmer Allison and Berkley Bell, University of Texas, net stars, along with Frank Shields of New York, and W. F. Coen, Jr., of Kansas City, are in the final round of the Southeastern Tennis tournament doubles play.

Bell and Allison won over L. B. Rice, Newton Center, Mass., and Carlton Shafer of Philadelphia 6-1, 6-3, 6-1, yesterday. Shields and Coen defeated Allen Behr and F. C. Baggs of New York, in straight sets, 6-2, 6-1.

No singles matches were played yesterday the semi-finals in that class to be played today. Finals in the doubles round also will be played today.

The doubles combination of Shields and Coen, both of whom will go to Augusta, Ga., next week for the Davis cup team tryouts, appeared at top form yesterday.

STIFEL, HADFIELD REACH GOLF FINALS

BELLEAIR, Fla., March 17.—(AP.)—Fritzi Stifel of Wheeling, W. Va., and Frances Hadfield of Milwaukee, are in the final round of the annual Belleair Women's Golf tournament, both springing surprises to eliminate their highly favored foes.

Miss Stifel defeated Helen Payson of Portland, Me., Canadian women's titleholder, two up, while Miss Hadfield won from Bernice Wall of Oshkosh, Wis., 5 and 3.

A large gallery followed the Payson-Stifel match and saw the latter start well, taking the first two holes. She never was headed from there out, although the Portland woman squared the match several times. Miss Stifel was three up at the turn, but was a bit shaky in the afternoon play.

DATES FOR CUP FINALS IN U. S. ZONE SET

CHICAGO, March 17.—(AP.)—The finals in the American zone of the Davis cup competition will be played in Chicago June 1, 2 and 3, James C. Stewart, president of the Western Lawn Tennis Association and member of the Davis Cup Committee, announced today.

The United States and Japan are expected to meet in the finals as the two teams are in opposite brackets of the American zone draw. Both appear likely to come through their early matches without extending themselves.

The United States net men will play their first match in Mexico City May 19 against the Mexican team, the winner to meet Canada in the semi-finals. Japan drew Cuba in the first round, with the winner meeting China.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

the purpose of hitting him, excluding, of course, such contacts as are necessary in blocking and parrying.

That's the way Wilde fought—never any clinching or holding on his part.

It will be a big help to the game if the clinching evil can be eliminated in America. It is clearly a foul under the rules, and the frequency with which many fighters are allowed to get away with it, either to escape fighting or to save themselves from punishment is a crying shame.

As measured by the quantity of fighting done, many a 10-round bout would be only a five-round affair if the time lost in clinging were deducted.

THERE will be no change in the nickname of the Boston American League club as long as President Bob Quinn is in power. A suggestion that a more appropriate name than "Redsox" might be selected for the club was put up to Quinn and brought the following reply:

The name "Boston Red Sox" has been music to my ears for years, before I ever dreamed of having anything to do with the club. I attended every world series they ever were in and was always happy when they won. If I can see them in one more world series within reasonable time, it will be the crowning glory of my baseball career, and so long as it is within my power they always will be the "Boston Red Sox."

ONE more example of the ideal combination of athlete and student, a boy not only possessing the necessary native ability but having the spirit of determination to bring it out and to overcome all obstacles in his path, has closed his athletic career at Pitt and will be graduated in June.

Paul Fisher.

He is Paul Fisher, football and basketball player, and star student besides, who entered the local university from Avalon High School.

Fisher earned no great reputation as a football player during the first part of his course at Pitt, but he kept plugging along with a spirit that was not to be denied, and he earned a place in the sun by a brilliant individual exhibition that helped to win the Colgate game in 1926.

Pitt had previously been beaten by Lafayette and if the Colgate game also had been lost the season would have been a failure.

Last fall Charley Edwards was looked upon generally as the man who would be first choice for quarterback, but when Edwards was injured Fisher stayed right on the job and acquitted himself with credit throughout the season.

The trip to the coast kept Paul from getting any basketball practice until the middle of January, but again he battled against his handicaps so successfully that he was one of the team's most valuable reserves up to the finish of the campaign.

And the most creditable part of it all is that while Fisher was showing so much spirit and working so hard for the university in an athletic way, he continually made such high marks in all his studies in the engineering school that he is considered one of the most brilliant students in that department.

One of the most popular boys in the university and a model student and athlete will be lost to the institution when Fisher graduates.

THE text of Judge Eugene Bonniwell's letter to the Pitt athletic officials, practically assuring the veteran athletes of Philadelphia, which honors a champion college athletic team at its banquet each February, will give that distinction to the Panther basketball team of 1928 next year, shows that Pittsburgh was not the only city in which the sensational showing of Coach Carlson's passers aroused unusual enthusiasm. The letter follows:

Jerry Wunderlich.

"My heartiest congratulations upon the wonderful record of your basketball team. I have no hesitancy in saying that in due course this marvelous quintet will receive a formal invitation to the next annual gathering of the Veteran Athletes, which will take place on Saturday, February 2, 1929. Please present the compliments of the Veterans to these real champions."

IN THE TRAINING CAMPS

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 17.—(AP.)—Bill Doak, one of a handful of spitball pitchers left in the big leagues, has been given an enthusiastic start on his fifteenth campaign in the majors. Doak Day was celebrated at Bradenton yesterday and the veteran's Brooklyn mates made it a big day by whipping the Red Sox, 7 to 2. Doak, a native of Pittsburgh, spent 12 years with the Cardinals. With the Robins in the last drive, Doak won 11 and lost 8 games.

TAMPA, FLA., March 17.—(AP.)—Arrival at the Washington Senators' training camp of Johnny Dobbs, manager of the Birmingham Barons, gave rise to reports that the annual farming out of rookies was about to get under way. ROUSH TO LEAD OFF

AUGUSTA, GA., March 17.—(AP.)—Ed Roush, who batted third in the Giants' lineup last year ahead of Hornsby, is slated to lead off McGraw's batting order in the approaching championship. Lefty O'Doul will follow Roush, with Lindstrom third.

HUGGINS OPTIMISTIC

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 17.—(AP.)—Three straight setbacks for the world champion Yankees fail to disturb Manager Miller Huggins who does not take the exhibitions in the bushes as indicators of what will happen when the season starts.

When Huggins left the ball park after the Yanks had taken a trimming from the Cards yesterday, a fan accosted him.

"Is them the Yankees that won the world series?" the enthusiast put in.

"Nope," replied Hug.

"Didn't the Yankees win the world series?"

"Yep, but this isn't the same team. But it'll be the same soon and we'll show it. When we'll be winning games will be after the bell rings."

REDS RETURN TO CAMP

ORLANDO, Fla., March 17.—(AP.)—The Cincinnati Reds will return to their training camp here after the exhibition game with the Washington Senators at Tampa today.

Why We Behave Like Human Beings

by George A. Dorsey, Ph.D., LL.D.

Fear Plays a Greater Part in Our Lives Than Hope

It Is Out of Date But Used To Propagate Hatred and So Influences Behavior

"Every little movement has a meaning of its own," is true of human beings Dr. Dorsey pointed out in The Sun-Telegraph yesterday, and why. Our emergency equipment is great and on it depends self-preservation, which, however, is modified by self-control. The difference between being moved to disgust at sight of a dead cat and moving to remove the cat is one of life's little jokes, he said.

Mothers Make Children Cowards

CHAPTER XXXV.

IS IT in our very nature to hate our enemies, impossible to love them? Why is the very cornerstone of Christ's teachings so rarely taken literally? James thinks those "swayed by it might well seem superhuman beings. Their life would be morally discreet from the lives of other men, and there is no saying what the effects might be: they might conceivably transform the world."

GEORGE A. DORSEY

They might indeed.

As the world is, hate is given freer rein. Recently it reigned; and each half of the world besought the same God to help it kill the other half. We can hate enough to kill, but killing no longer solves problems, nor hating an enemy convert one.

Fear is old stuff, out of date. It should be thrown off with our swaddling clothes. And yet it probably plays a greater part than hope in the daily lives of most men and women. Fears are played upon by all sorts of propagandists for political, social, and religious purposes. Fear of hell-fire is supposed to lead to love of heaven; fear of "ign'runt foreigners" to hatred of aliens and so to the closing of the doors. And the only reason this nation could not be led to hate Germany as France did was because we could not be made to feel the fear of Germany as France did.

Perverted Emotionalism

But for most of us life is only meat and the body raiment. Same reaction system, same environment: stereotyped behavior because our world stands still. And an enormously valuable emotional reservoir of energy, capable of moving mountains and giving all life a joy-ride, is expended in hating those we envy and kicking against the pricks or in fleeing in terror from our shadows because we cannot shake them off.

And so it is that an instinctive emotional endowment rooted deep in the body of life and inherent in man and mammals and all living beings that meet dangerous situations with complex mechanisms which must function as a unit and without warning, becomes personal and individual. The organization of that endowment into specific fears and hates and general attitudes favoring negative and positive responses begins the day we are born.

"When I was a child, I spake as a child. I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things." Some childish things we do put away, and we do forget most of the rag dolls, tin soldiers and mud pies; but we get our start in childhood for much of our bent and most of our set. We do not put away our nature. Paul was an exception.

Stimulus of Fear

We are afraid of the dark, of little green worms, of hundreds of things. And get emotionally excited about them. Some react to a cabbage worm as they would to a wild elephant or to a mouse; and are as nearly scared to death as life lets them. It is no merit of their own that they have not died of fright a thousand times.

We are not born that way. The newborn sets up a fear reaction only to fearful stimuli: the bang of a door, being dropped, a sudden push or pull at its blanket: especially by removing its support. It catches its breath, clutches at anything within reach, closes its eyes, cries, voids waste. Memories of life in the trees? Why not: sudden noises and movements and withdrawal of support were real dangers then. The infant could not flee, but it could be scared: later it runs and hides when it is afraid.

A rat learns to thread a maze for food: it must pass a trap which always terrifies it. Remove the trap: it jumps as though the trap were present. A dog chases a cat up a tree four times a day. Every time the dog appears I appear. By and by the cat takes to the tree without the dog—my face is enough to make it climb a tree.

Conditions of Fear

A small dog was tossed into the carriage of a 180-day old child. The sudden and unexpected move terrified it. A year later it showed the same kind of terror at tame white mice. A door was slammed and at the same time a cat was shown to a child: thereafter it was afraid of the cat.

The child is afraid of a sudden and loud noise. It hears the thunder, sees the lightning: it learns to be afraid of the lightning. If the flash is blinding, it is afraid of the room. If there is some particular person in the room every time the lightning flashes, the child learns to be afraid of that person, lightning or no lightning.

With a what-not loaded with what not in the parlor and a dresser covered with hand-painted junk in the spare bedroom, and both parlor and bedroom in perpetual gloom, means must be found to keep little Willie out. A short-cut is found in the fact that Willie can be scared. And Willie is scared. By the time he is 3 or sooner, he is as big a coward as his mother was when she was 3. He is afraid of the dark; jumps every time a door is slammed; squeals at the sight of a mouse, and if a bat flies into the room, the whole household is in panic. And everybody has bad dreams. And little Willie comes out of his nightmare in a cold sweat with a scream: some ghost story has done its work.

We move about in a lighted room with the aid of our eyes. In a dark room we are not distracted by what we see and consequently are more alert to what we feel and hear. We keep meeting with the unexpected, sometimes the sudden crash of a falling chair, bark of a dog, bump on the forehead. And by the time our fear of the dark has become further conditioned by ghosts and hobgoblins, we are more than afraid of a dark graveyard. And if mother is afraid of strangers and shows it, we are afraid also, because our habit of expectancy of her behavior is dislocated.

So with rage. The baby cannot fight, but by cries, slashings with arms and legs, stiffening of body, flushed face, clenched fists and held breath, it shows its rage when its nose is pinched, head held, or its body hampered. And it soon acquires the ability to kick and slash and scream. I have seen a boy of 2 beat his head on the floor in a rage at being denied something. Such early outbursts are signs of the coward and the murderer that are in us. The way these potentialities are trained is the key to character and the clue to most of our attitudes.

NICARAGUA GETS MORE MARINES

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—After the meeting of President Coolidge and his cabinet today at which the Nicaraguan situation was discussed the Navy Department ordered an additional 1,000 marines to prepare to sail for the revolution-torn republic.

This contingent will swell the army of pacification, made up of American Marines, to 2,500 rifles. With the new draft will be sent additional machine guns, light artillery and airplanes.

Until the elections, which parallel those of the United States, the Marines are to be used in a more vigorous campaign to exterminate the rebels under Augustino Sandino, who has caused heavy losses among the American Marines and brought the political situation to a grave crisis. At the election the Marines will be stationed at the various polling places and will also police every town and hamlet to see that everyone qualified is allowed to vote.

However, as much of the territory is now controlled by Sandino and his followers, the Marine forces there will be directed to exterminate him, as he has announced that he will resist any effort to police his territory.

The task of supervising the election, agreed upon by the United States following an armistice between the warring factions, was regarded as a difficult one under normal conditions. However, the danger has been materially increased by the refusal of the Nicaraguan Congress to pass a law to permit the United States to serve. Nicaragua has consequently been notified that the supervision will be forceful.

At 100 She Views World Darkly; Raps Dry Law

Universal Service.

CHICAGO, March 17.—Something is wrong with the world these days, in the opinion of Mrs. Hannah Hanley, who celebrated her one-hundredth birthday in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary Ryan, today.

There seems to be too many murders, she thinks, too much crime of all sorts, compared with earlier days in her life. The prohibition law, too, she thinks wrong.

"If a man wants to take a drink or two, well let him," she said. "It won't do him any harm; but don't try to stop him with any laws."

3 BOYS GIVEN LONG TERMS

Three Negro youths of the Penn avenue district convicted of a series of robberies and hold-ups received severe sentences from Judge Ambrose B. Reid in Criminal Court yesterday.

Henry Coffey, 18, was sentenced to the penitentiary for 14 to 28 years; Eugene Poindexter, 18, for 10 to 20 years, and Robert Frazer, 21, for 6 to 12 years in the workhouse. They were found guilty of a series of depredations in the East End district during the last week of January, stealing two automobiles, holding up four taxicab drivers and pedestrians and breaking into five buildings.

ARMED PAIR HELD OVER

Fred Prezioso, alias Fred Christy, 28, of 1225 Epiphany street, and James Digiano, 24, of 1025 Vickroy street, were "out for a walk" yesterday when they were arrested for carrying revolvers, they told Magistrate E. M. Hough in Allegheny Police Court today.

Prezioso said he carried his automatic for "pastime," and Digiano pleaded he needed his for protection. Neither could explain notes found on Prezioso, which indicated they may have planned a payroll holdup. They were held for further questioning.

RAID PARTY IN PENN AVE.

A party for the benefit of the City of Pittsburgh was held in a second-floor apartment at 5025 Penn avenue, last night, police reported in Morals Court today. The proceeds amounted to $340.

Four women and five men, arrested when police raided the place on complaint of another tenant, failed to appear for hearing and their bonds of $340 were forfeited. Alice Black, 26, had been taken as the keeper of a disorderly house and her eight guests as visitors.

One rides out Fifth avenue, crosses Penn and turns onto Hamilton avenue . . . The conductor on the Hamilton car is an old-timer who sonorously calls out each and every stop, thus: "Shady avenue—Shady." There are different inflections as he lowers his voice on the first Shady and then comes the rising inflection on the second Shady . . . A customer suddenly decides he is at his stop . . . He will ride to the next one, however, to avoid delay as he fishes for his carfare. "We're in no hurry," says the conductor, "we'll wait." In vain the customer fishes for a coin or a street car check . . . He has nothing but a $5 bill. The conductor makes the change without grumbling . . . That courtesy campaign of the railways company has helped make street car men the most considerate group dealing with a strange and at times trying public.

CHANCES are that only a few citizens of that district who get entertainment from the work of the boosters realize that the leading lights of the organization contribute time and real effort to make the district a fine one. One of the newest gags being told by the theatrical visitors here is the one about the tobacco man who asked an actor if, for $1,000, he would indorse a certain cigaret. "For $1,000," said the actor, "I will indorse opium."

A MAGAZINE writer recently wrote an article for "Plain Talk" on "The Passing of the American Guest." About two nights after he wrote the article while entertaining guests he hanged himself. His posthumous article in part said:

"Alas, the American guest is gone. Look at the men who come into your home. No more may you see the affable fellow who came into festive houses, mayhap tendering a dainty nosegay to the mistress of the house. Forgotten are the days of clinking crystals and witty toasts, gone the mellow evenings of grateful sipping. The bon mot died with the connoisseur of vintages and gave place to the pun and gin. The frail goblet surrendered to the uncouth demijohn, and the guest has become a customer, the host a graceless tenderer of voluminous intoxicants.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Jerry King, good-looking, charming and 19, meets Saxon Rhodes, a young architect, and falls in love with him. Marza warns her that he will not make a good husband. Jerry sees Saxon kiss Tess Willi, but still loves him and refuses to marry Heine Ross. Saxon finds her sketching and they declare their love. Saxon's uncle sends him abroad to finish his studies. Tess Willi also goes; Jerry is jealous. No letters from Saxon, she cables; he writes that he has been ill. Heine again declares his love for her and begs her to let him tell her something. Jerry earns $150 for making panels for an exclusive shop. Saxon is home and he and Jerry find happiness in each others company. They attend a party in John Iver's studio and Jerry learns much. Jerry's drawings are rejected and she is very blue. She thinks Heinie loves her better than Saxon, but a note from him proves different.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

SHE sat down and wrote, filling page after page with humble, ardent protestations. She wanted him to succeed—she was willing and eager to forget herself that he might win. . . . And she wouldn't be the halter about his neck. . . .

"So you must forgive the bad-tempered wench who loves you, Saxon. I think that people who love each other must let the other be true to himself first, if they want their love to last. I wouldn't take your shiny ambition from you. You'd hate me if I did and I'd deserve to be hated. And I love you because this is a part of your glory—

"Only let us be sure that we don't lose the brave years through lack of courage to seize them. Let us not wait for safety and security. The dead have this in supremest degree. And there's a vixen here who'll scrub floors for you—which is a confession no female thing should ever make."

Now it was all settled! Now it would ripple along like song! She licked the flap of the envelope with her tongue and sealed it with little thumps of her fist.

She would never doubt again—never flare up in that wild impatience.

CHAPTER XXIII.

SAXON took off his hat, letting the breeze, as it came singing round the hills, ruffle his hair. Beautiful slope here with that distant view of the ocean. He would save as many trees as he could . . . build the house around the garden.

Just across the way in this new section of St. Francis Woods was that little Spanish house he had builded before he went to Europe. The great cathedral window in the living room faced him. He remembered the night Jerry came to his office, he showed her these plans. And she insisted on this lovely window. They argued about it. Suddenly she grabbed the pencil, her little brown hand moving capably, swiftly. That triumphant: "Here I've got it! Saxon, what a love of a place—books here—a screen there. . . ."

"You on one side of the fireplace, Jerry—I on the other!"

With a trenchant vividness, he now recalled this scene. That little house, theirs! He had wanted to marry Jerry then—before he went away. Young and wildly sweet—his if he cared to claim her. He had railed against his work; against the ambition he knew would make a slave of him.

Today he no longer railed. His course was irrevocably chalked. He loved his work. It was his inner self. He exulted in it and resented only what hampered him.

Yet as he drove slowly through the trees this morning of a sparkling February, spring thrilling in the tender grass and budding flowers, he thought aching. "God—I wish we could!"

In a garden he saw a girl with black, curly hair snipping roses that were climbing on a lattice fence. He thought, again, longing: "Oh, Lord!"

His senses were assailed with the sunlight and perfume. Against all these clean new houses were hedges of fragrant stock—beds of hyacinths, exhaling their penetrant loveliness.

He remembered last spring—hyacinths invading his window. How he had wanted Jerry then. On any terms.

And she would have come to him! She wrote back that she would most gaily have come.

Last night—only last night he reminded her of his fiery avowal. He said laughing, but drawn by the lure of her as she went whistling and taunting about the room: "You knew I was 6,000 miles away. So you were safe to say it."

She came up to him, the sweet, flower-blue eyes flinging into his with a song and a sob: "What do I hide now that you're here? I meant it. Oh, the power you have on me, Saxon Rhodes! You well know that I meant it."

He drew a long, heated breath and drove slowly round the winding slopes—higher. The houses were fewer.

He was seeing Jerry as she flung her hands to him with that little faint laugh, the young sweet eyes closing. He was feeling her fresh, soft lips moving on his. His heart thumped. It was so warm here—so hushed—so redolent with perfume and song. He murmured, hoarsely, the blood hot about his neck: "We should! God— we should!"

Suddenly it occurred to him like an inspiration that Amy lived just around the next turn. He would go and visit Amy. Amy was his favorite sister—an eager, brilliant girl. In his excitement he now thought of her as she was five years ago. He was not quite 22 then and secretly wild with envy of this girl, who was just a year his senior. For she had written two stories that were accepted. She had earned $150. And she had flung herself into this mad, beautiful love affair with Donald Gray. Seized it while it was fresh and sweet and high. She was always like that.

Since his return he had only seen her three or four times at the family dinners.

The neat stuccoed house—one of a block of stuccoed toy bungalows—was set back 20 feet. Lawn nicely mowed—gay yellow daffodils in a perky row right up to the front door. The milk bottles set out in order.

His spirits rose. Amy made a go of it!

The door opened precipitously to his ring.

"Oh! Who in the world would expect you this time in the morning!" The anger in Amy's face flashed to a beaming pleasure. "Come in, Saxy—will you have a cup of coffee? Stay for lunch?" And imagining his eyes on her spattered apron, she doubled it hastily under her arm. "I'd certainly have dolled if I'd dreamed you were calling. I've just finished the daily line of wash.

"Stay, won't you? We'll have the coziest old chat—"

Bang—clatter—bang! As though the house were collapsing.

"Good God—what's that?"

Amy laughed. "Just your nephew committing his daily atrocities."

A boy of four came stamping down the stairs, a girl of three pulling at his shirt and screaming loudly for aid. "Buster," said Amy emphatically, "pick up every one of those blocks and give them to sister. Now go into the sun room and play nicely."

Happily to Saxon: "I went up to see the lot where you're to build. Wouldn't I adore to be up there with a big walled-in garden, where I could turn these young savages loose?"

A scream from the sun room followed by a dismal howl from the cat and sister bawling piteously: "Stop hitting me—stop hitting me!"

"It's not always as bad as this!" said Amy, flying down the hall. "Buster, give the kitty to Marjorie. And stop teasing. Shame on you! A big boy of four!"

The big boy of four surrendered the cat, smiled blandly, his hands deep in his pockets as he mustered resources for his next move.

"Really, once in a while they're angels," said Amy, returning breathless and flurried. "They take it out on you when they're not—which is most of the time, I suppose. Listen to that—! Sometimes I get murderous!"

"How's the writing, Amy? Have you done anything lately?"

"No," said the girl wearily, "I don't even think about it."

"You should! You're just as much out of tune scrubbing and washing as I'd be. What's become of your fire, letting yourself get into a rut?"

Amy looked at her hands—blinking—sudden, idiotic tears flying to her eyes.

"Why don't you hire a nurse—or a cook and take the time for it?"

"Hire a nurse on a newspaperman's wage? Don't be silly! Besides, Don is writing in the evenings now. I tried to, but I'm just dumb by the end of the day.

"They say no house is big enough for two families. I'm beginning to think no house is big enough for two careers. Somebody's got to be the background. In this case it seems to be Amy!"

She looked at her hands. The nail of the third finger was broken to the quick. She rubbed it and made a valiant effort to smile. "You've caught me in a rotten mood, Saxy dear. I'll get over it in the next 40 years. Then I'll be like dad. You know his marriage was just one long bliss. But I often heard ma's side of it. And she was no quitter—was she? And they were happier a thousand times than most of the people today.

"You know none of dad's five children ever bit or slapped another. They never cried or grabbed the table cloth, all set with dishes, to the floor. We were all little angels. Looking forward we think it will be like that—all roses and music for us. And looking back we kid ourselves that it was. The prospect thrills. The retrospect mellows. And the only hard part comes in between—in the living of it!"

"But I wouldn't give up the writing, Amy. You've got real talent. Look what Mary Robert Rinehart did. And she has three sons. So you can make a go of it!"

"Her husband was a doctor—not a newspaper rewriteman. And after all, she was Mary Roberts—not Amy Rhodes. I don't believe they were ever hard-pressed. It's all right to sneer at money when you have it. It's not a bit important then. But money can be the cruelest and most tyrannical thing on the earth to the fellow who hasn't got it!

"Don't you fool yourself, Sacks! No one ever loved more than Don and I loved. You know that. But it burns up your fine fervor trying to make both ends meet. You don't stop loving, I suppose—but you do stop rejoicing."

She laughed softly, putting her hand affectionately on his arm: "How is she, Saxy? Just as pretty just as sweet? Well, she won't thank you four years from now, when she's hanging out the family wash. I don't care how attractive you are! Get your future settled first—both of you."

"Don't be silly, Amy! She'd love me if I had 40 feet and she had to darn socks for all of them!"

She followed him to the door, saying wistfully. "I hope there's going to be one in our family who gets what he wants! I hope you won't get reckless, Saxy, and think you can do what no one else has ever done."

He grinned: "But you know there is Mary Roberts Rinehart!"

She nodded absently—sadly.

When he got into the car, he pulled his collar loose—stifling.

CHAPTER XXIV.

JERRY pushed the hundred bangles over her arm and took a long, rapt glance at her image. Oh, that risque crimson bolero and the broad blue stripe bringing out the misty fire of her eyes.

"Carmen," she saluted, grinning joyously at her reflection, "behold your twin, the dernier cri in deviltry!"

"I look pretty good," she added half aloud.

"Yes—you do," Marza answered, stepping suddenly behind her.

"And I feel—oh, mother, high as mountains and deep as the sea tonight."

"It is well to be 22!"

Jerry turned for a full view of her mother. Marza was dazzling in white satin and pearls with a crowned headdress of brilliants—a glowing, splendid queen of Sheba.

"With just an exotic touch of sadness to make you utterly royal, Marza, you're the only woman in the world that age doesn't touch."

To herself, excitedly and with that old smothered pain and wonder: "It's love that does it! Love that makes Marza immortal."

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By ADELE GARRISON

Miss Lincoln Is Quickly Revived But Dicky Is Acting Strangely

FOR the tense fraction of a second following Eleanor Lincoln's shriek and fall, we sat aghast, paralyzed by the temporary inertia which holds almost everyone for a flashing instant after some unexpected accident.

Katherine's reaction alone was so quick it practically was instantaneous. She was seated at the farthest corner of the veranda, yet when the rest of us crowded around Miss Lincoln's chair, the little nurse was already kneeling at the girl's side and was issuing crisp directions to Philip Veritzen and Noel who were bending over the girl.

"One of you take her shoulders, the other her feet," she said, "and carry her to the library. There's a big flat couch there. Put her on it. Marion, get some water, and Mary, bring my small leather kit from my room."

The young girls were at the door before she had finished speaking, and back to the library with the required articles almost before the two Veritzens had carried their lovely insensible burden into the room and laid her upon the couch.

With characteristic common sense Mother Graham called Junior over to her corner.

"I can help best by keeping him out of the way," she said, "but whatever has got into Richard? Does he think he can catch that owl which frightened the girl? She can't be much used to the country to faint at the sound of a hoot owl."

I realized then, what subconsciously I had noticed before, that at Miss Lincoln's fall, and without waiting to ascertain her condition, Dicky had dashed out of the veranda. I could hear him running in the direction from which the sound of the hooting owl had come. But I had no time to waste upon conjectures as to the reason for his odd behavior.

"I'll let you know all about it Mother," I said vaguely as I hurried after the others, Lillian at my side and young Mr. Jackson close at my heels, his rapid breathing the only indication that he was at all perturbed over the incident.

We reached the library as the beautiful inert figure of the swooning girl was tenderly laid upon the couch. Katherine dismissed the men with a crisp "Thank you, that will be all I need," and the next instant Veritzen pere et fils had gone back to the porch, taking young Jackson with them.

But after all, it needed no strenuous measures to bring back the fainting girl to consciousness. Her eyelids flickered before Katherine could sprinkle water in her face, and in another second or two she had opened her eyes and was staring wildly up at us.

"Has he gone?" she asked, terrifiedly.

With a warning shake of her head at us, Katherine bent over her and took firm hold of her hands.

"You are imagining things, my dear," she said. "There was no one here. You were frightened at that unearthly hoot owl, and no wonder, if you've never heard one before. You were overtired and lost consciousness for a bit. But you're perfectly all right now, or will be when you lie still here and rest a little."

But Eleanor Lincoln pushed aside her ministering hands and sat erect.

"I'm perfectly all right now," she said steadily.

Real Love Is Merry, Laughing

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE search for pleasure is the main quest in life of a considerable number of the so-called "flaming youth" of today, and to an even greater extent, doubtless, of middle-aged imitators of youth.

Night clubs, jazz, dance halls, joy riding, the hip flask—all have been held out as the best means of inducing care-free fun and laughter. But the happiest people I know in the world are those who love. I do not mean by love, just physical attraction, for infatuation brings with it suspicion, jealousy, and may quickly turn to indifference or hate. Nor do I refer to mere personal attachment, which pins all its hopes on the favor of one changeable human being. By true love I mean affection of the spirit and mind as well as the glamor of physical lure. This affection includes trust and rules out suspicion, jealousy and every other destructive quality.

THERE really are girls and young men who choose life partners on a basis of character, suitability and intense personal attraction. And marriages formed in this way lead to really happy homes, filled with laughter of little children and the peace, security and joy of contented family life.

Fortunately, this great country of ours—possibly, I may go so far as to say the world—is filled with homes that ring with hearty, kindly laughter. Those who dwell in such homes do not need artificial stimulants in order to bubble over with high spirits.

Fun and nonsense are signs of intelligence. Lewis Carrol was a learned mathematician, yet he enjoyed writing the best book of nonsense in the world—Alice in Wonderland. Why should anyone go through life solemn as an owl unless she would also be stupid as the owl actually is?

WHO should be happier than those having the inspiration of understanding affectionate married companionship to lighten their path, however, difficult.

The rule works both ways. Good-humored laughter attracts love, just as true love leads to light hearts and laughter.

I know a girl who is neither beautiful nor born with any great gift of fascination. She has a good head and holds a good position.

But she is welcomed everywhere for her quick, sunny, sympathetic good humor, her ready laughter—not the "loud laugh that speaks the vacant mind," but a natural expression of security of confidence and enthusiastic joy in living!

This friend confided to me the other day her plan to be married this spring to the Dearest Man. He is indeed a lucky man!

His wife will not take herself too seriously to adapt herself to his moods and interests. She will be ready to go out with him, looking her prettiest, whenever he is all enthusiasm over an evening of fun. She will also be equal to entering into a quieter mood of untalkative enjoyment of the morning papers and coffee with him, or to telling him amusing happenings of the day when he comes home tired at night.

WHY should we associate joy with the evil, sordid side of life? There tragedy stalks. Innocence and purity laugh and jest merrily, lightly.

I heard a very wise man say he could imagine God—his God of perfect Love—as laughing joyously with his creation!

Laughter is the very rhythm of love. Nature bids us laugh tenderly at kittens and puppies and babies, at lovers and, springtime! Prove your home is the abode of merry laughter, born of trust, love, security and confidence.

Laughter accompanies the power of love just as a sparkling white-cap is part of a mighty wave. Cultivate love that is true and sound; love that is wise; that understands and does not criticize; love that forgets as well as forgives; love that trusts and laughs light-heartedly. Then you will indeed be rich, and the home you make with the man of your choice should abound with tender affection, eager, unselfish interest and amused laughter throughout your lifetime of happy marriage.

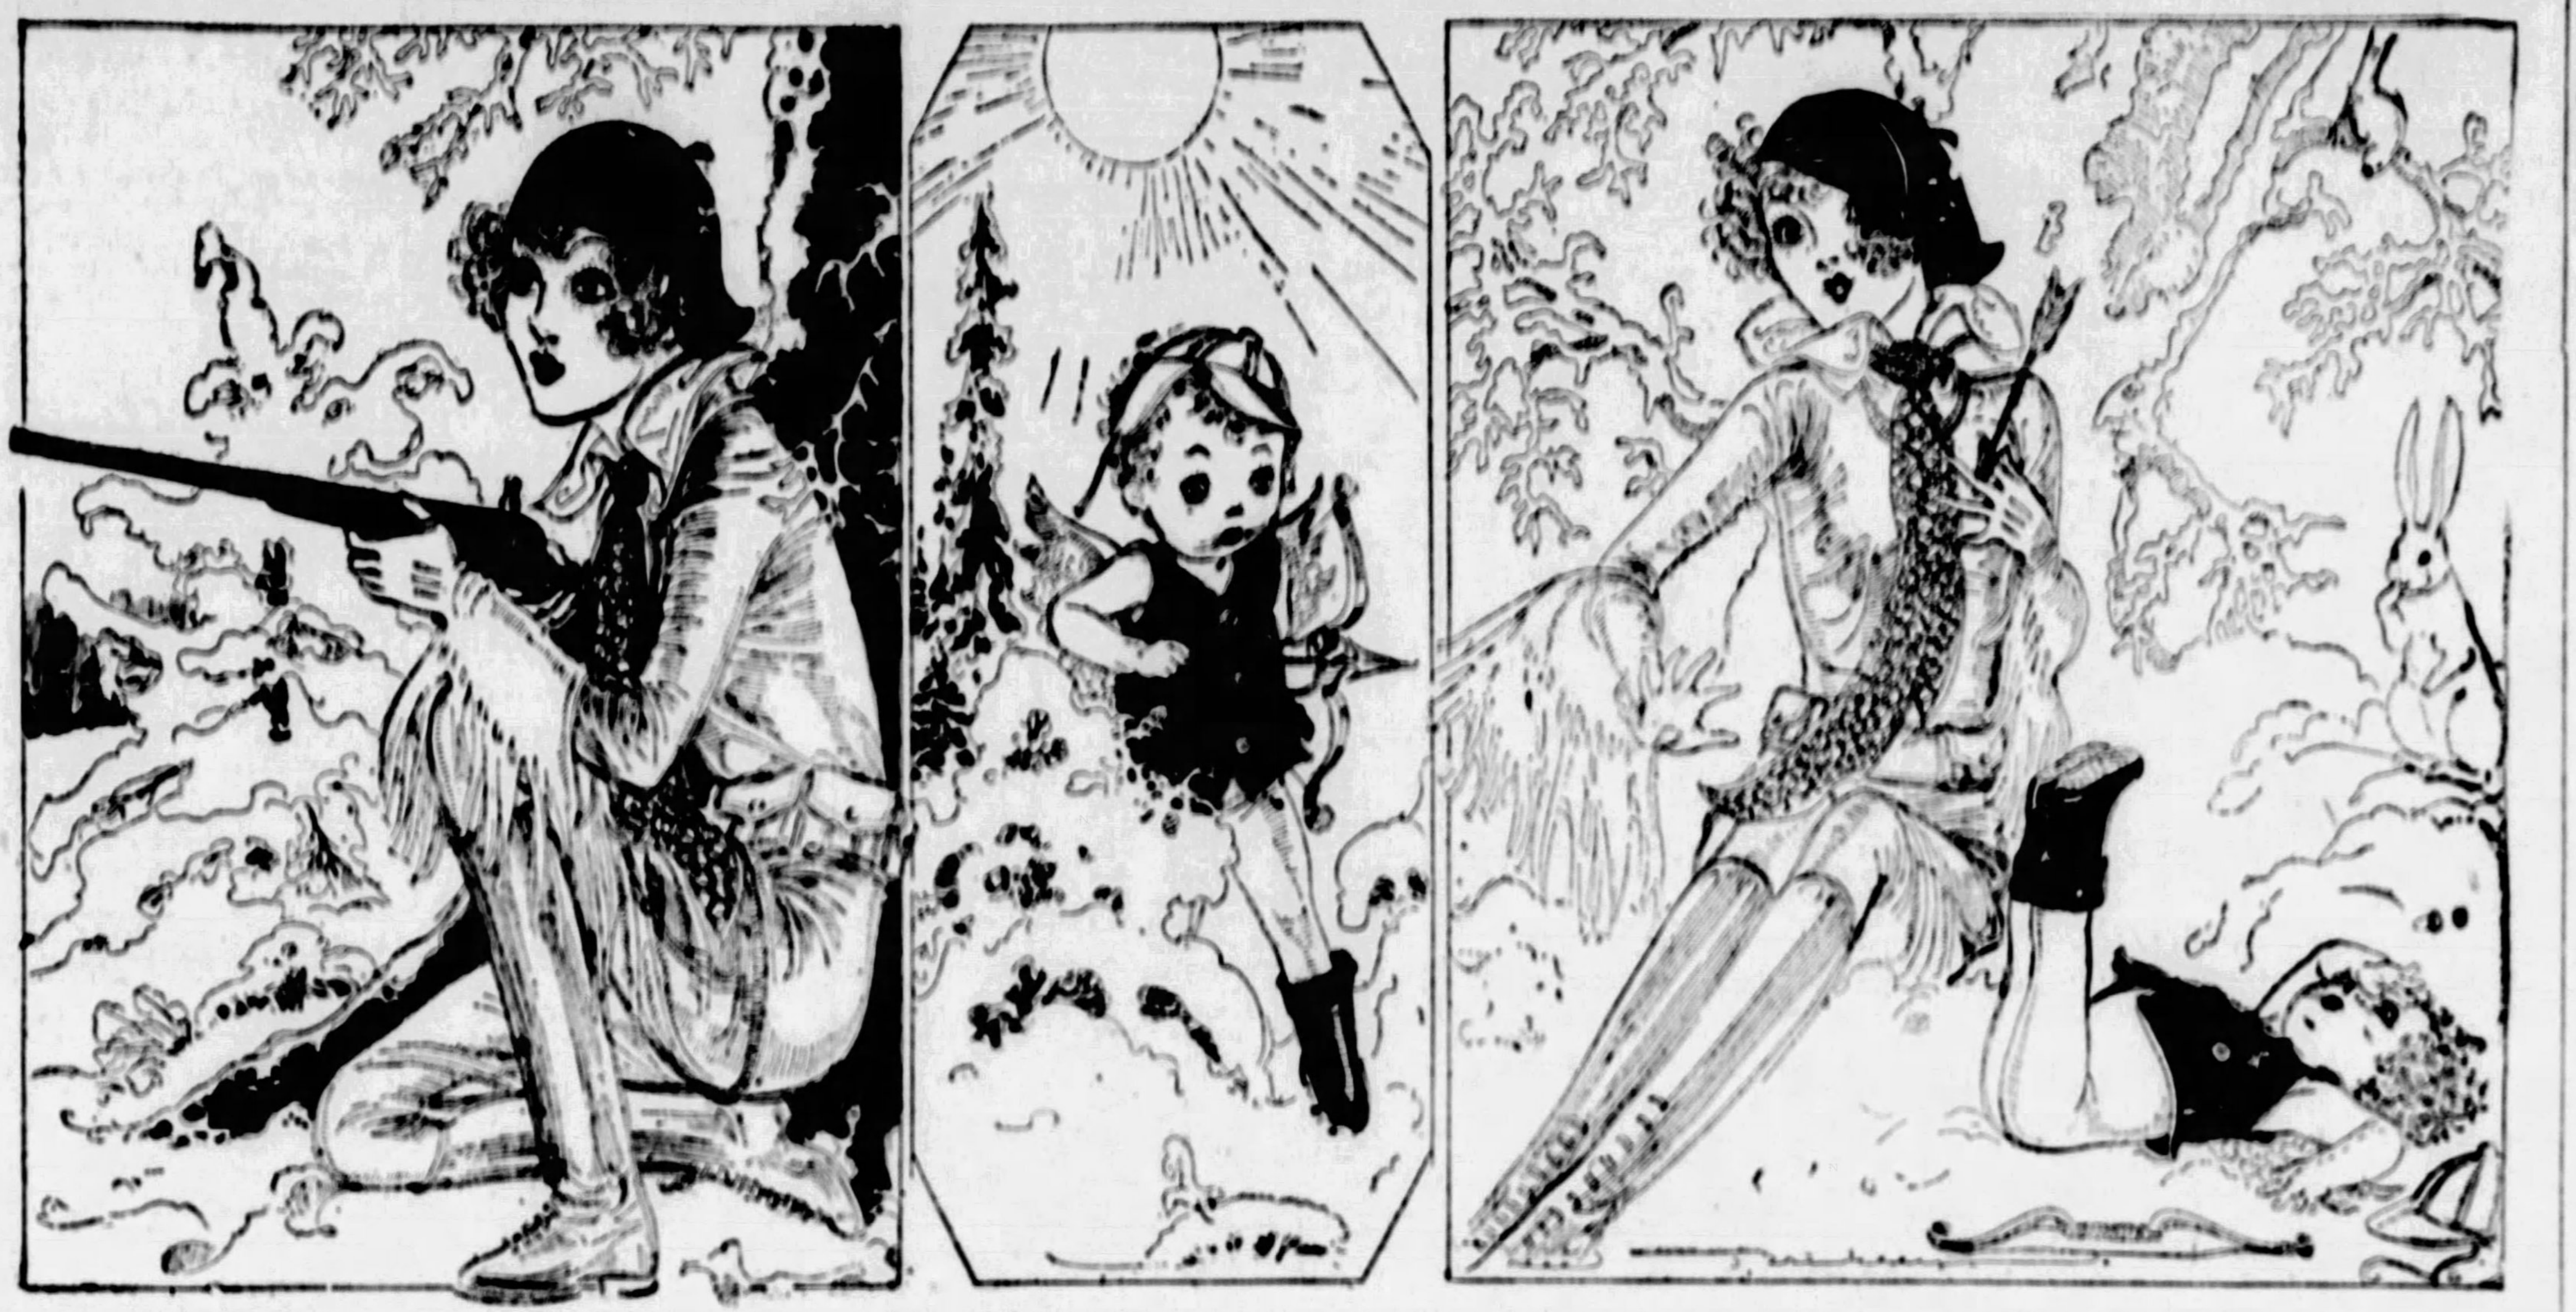
A SUCCESSFUL HUNT

Drawn By Nell Brinkley



THE hunters and the hunted are out, this kind, all seasons of the year. The casual passerby cannot tell which is which, because in this tale the stalker is the stalked, and the stalked is the stalker. The Diana-girl is after the scalp, the lovely golden fleece, of the greatest Hunter of them all. And he in his turn, while being hunted, is haunting the silent copses for a wing at the heart under her rose-colored sweater.

They crouch. They rise and peer. They nimbly step and drift into shelters. They listen. They search the ground. They go into ambush and wait; arrow and gun cocked; each on the trail of the other. They circle. He finds a tiny knot of ribbon, a trifle from a girl's equipment. She comes upon a rosy feather. They cheer under their separate breaths! They trudge on.

And suddenly, out of a thicket, delicately iced over, every twig and spray until it has been made into a crystal fairy-screen, they plunge into one another! She sees his red hunting vest. He sees her brown boots and girl's knees tight in breeches, and her rose sweater. There is a violent twang and a great pop!

And the next picture is an aghast Cupid upon his back with his overshoes pointed to heaven and a surprised eye open, and a horrified huntress sitting in the snow holding her heart!

There is a third person in the woods; you knew that, didn't you? trudging gaily along toward his own victims and his own fate. He, too, is hunting, for either or both of the two who now sit stunned in the snow. He will break into the setting and immediately fall a victim to a recovered bowman, and in his turn lay the bowman low. And soon you will see there a delightful triangle of friendship and love such as could hardly be expressed in plain English.

In other words, the hunting party will have been a huge success!

Ventilation a Vital Factor in Health

DR COPELAND

ONE of the strange things about human beings is their apparent indifference to the sort of air they breathe. They will sit in a room, stifling in its heat and poisoned in its air. Without protest and, so far as I can judge, utterly unconscious of the vileness of the atmosphere, they go about their affairs in the most unconcerned manner.

In many of the Senate committee rooms I have made myself disagreeable lots of times by pleading for fresh air. The Senate chamber is hardly better than a thermos bottle as a place to live for hours at a time.

Go into a lawyer's office, or the office of some big business executive—nine times out of ten the room is choking with tobacco smoke, or else stuffy from lack of ventilation. You feel like being sent to a hospital after a half hour's visit in such an atmosphere.

I am not railing about tobacco. While I do not use it, most of my friends do, and they appear to thrive in spite of it. I do insist, however, that it is not good for health to breathe over and over again the smoke-laden atmosphere of a tightly closed room.

To smoke in the open air or in a room with an open window, will spare you the harm of breathing the smoke. You wouldn't think of sitting around a flour mill, in the dust of a fanning mill, or in any other dusty place. You try to pass an automobile kicking up the dust on a country road. You have sense to know that dust is an irritant and will damage your nose and throat and lungs, and yet you endure a dusty or smoky room.

Fresh air and good ventilation are essential to health. Make it a point to keep your office, home, factory or other place of business, clear from smoke, dust and irritating vapors. You cannot afford to stay in the wrong atmosphere.

In a sense, dusty and smoky air acts like sandpaper. It irritates the mucus membrane, preparing the way for the germs of disease.

There can be no doubt that the agent capable of causing the common cold, has the way prepared for its attacks by the irritation produced by dust and dirt and smoke. If you would avoid frequent colds, give yourself an abundance of fresh air, day and night.

Admiral Peary went to the North Pole without a cold. He came back to civilization and almost died immediately. He "took cold" in the warm and enervating surroundings of civilization.

Make it your business to see that your family and associates are protected against disease. They are not so protected if the nose and lungs are constantly bombarded by offensive air.

I hope I have made clear how essential this matter really is. You cannot expect to be well and vigorous if you continue to live in the wrong atmosphere.

Schools, churches, lodge rooms, railroad stations and cars, street cars and omnibuses, court rooms, and all other public places should be kept free from dust and smoke. Fresh air will add to the happiness, alertness and chance of good health.

For the Lovelorn

By ELEANOR GALE

Correspondents are reminded that all letters sent to this department must be written on one side of the paper only, and that no personal replies are ever given.

Unlucky at Love

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have a big problem for you to solve. It is about a love affair, of course. You have helped me in several of my struggles and I won out, so I thought you could help me this time also. I am not hard to look at, as one fellow told me, and have had lots of friends in both sexes. My girl friends I can keep, but my boy friends I am doubtful of. I have had many fellows, but have lost out. Many of my girl friends say that I show them too much that I care for them. Is this true? If it is, how may I overcome this? I have been trying hard, but it seems as though I can't. I am greatly in love with a fellow three years my senior who I met last winter, but never bothered much about him. My one girl friend was in love with him and he was in love with her also, but after a while she got tired of him and they fell out. Not long after this I called him up and told him to come down to my house to see me, because I thought he was quite lonesome without his old sweetheart. So he came. He told me he would see me at work on Friday night, but he never showed up. He also told me he would take me to the movie on Saturday night, but he never showed up for that either. I asked his friend about this and he said, "Oh, he didn't feel good," and made several other excuses. So he came down again, but I always asked him down. We went out one night and he told me he wanted me to go to California with him in April. I consented, but asking how I would get out of the house without any one being suspicious and he said he would arrange it so I would have no trouble at all. I was rather happy that night when I went home. I asked him if he would go out with my girl friend and her fellow and I some night, so he said yes, so we fixed the night and the time to meet us. Everyone else showed up but him. I felt bad that evening and still feel bad about it, although it has only happened a few nights ago. If I should see him on the street what should I do? Miss Gale, I am heart-broken. I can't get interested in anything since. Is it my fault that he has done this? If it is, please tell me what to do, as I will be glad to follow your advice, and will do anything to get him back.

UNLUCKY AT LOVE.

My dear, you can't "get back" someone you never had, and it is perfectly obvious that this boy is not interested in you. No doubt your many invitations have had something to do with his lack of interest. Men like to do the running, you know. Forget him.

Broken-Hearted Ann

DEAR MISS GALE:

Last September I went away for a few months to New York. Just before leaving home I met a very nice fellow from my home town, and had just one date with him before I left for New York. We kept up a correspondence all the time I was in New York and after I came home, but we had moved to another town about 20 miles from our home town, and of course I came home to another town, not seeing him as I intended to. He had taken sick while I was away and I wrote to him regularly as usual. About a month after I had been home he stopped writing and as we were on the best of terms, I see no reason why he stopped. He told me he cared quite a lot for me and as I care for him I would like to win him back.

BROKEN-HEARTED ANN.

Why not write to him once more, my dear, unless you have already made inquiries as to his reason for stopping.

Perplexed

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been reading your column for quite a while and think your advice is wonderful. Now I myself come for advice. I am a girl of 16 and am a sophomore in high school. About a year ago I met a young man and it seemed that we liked each other the first time we met. I went out with him quite frequently and he seemed much interested in me. It seemed as though there was much jealousy among a few girl friends of mine and him. I had kept company with him for almost a year and I must say that he was and is a perfect gentleman. But lately he seems rather cool toward me and I can't seem to get an opportunity to talk to him. These last few months he seems to keep as far distant as he can from me, and I don't know why he should act in this manner, as I have not said or done anything to hurt him so as to cause his actions as they are toward me. Do you think these jealous friends have put this between us? Would it be proper for me to stop and ask him if I in any way have hurt his feelings? My girl friends all liked him and were very jealous because he picked me instead of the others to go with. I do not pet, smoke or drink. I also do not go to public dances or parties, while my girl friends are known by all to do so. Would you please advise me as to what I should do about this matter. This first fellow I shall call "A". Then I have a story to relate about his chum, "B". "B" and I have been goods friends since "A" seems so distant. He asked me what had happened between "A" and I and he informed me that "A" thought as much of me now as he did when we kept company. I had gone with "B" for three months but have not been with him within the last month, as he is an officer of the law and it has been impossible for him to get out. Do you think that "B's" company with me was a scheme made up between "A" and "B"? "B" says that he cares for me. I do not care for "B" as well as for "A". I certainly do think "A" is a wonderful young man. You may think that I am too young to know what love is, but I really do love "A" and like "B" as a friend. I never went with anyone before unless I was brought home from a private party before I went with "A". I have not been keeping company with anyone. "A" was my first friend, "B" my second. I did not start to go with "B" until I saw that my friendship with "A" seemed at an end. I would not care to associate with any of the other fellows in town and no one would interest me, as they are not the type of fellows I like. I don't like fellows that go with all kinds of girls. As far as I am concerned, if I had my choice of the two I would select "A", as he is the one I love. However, I like "B" as a friend. I am leaving you to solve my problem for me.

"PERPLEXED."

If you get an opportunity, I see no reason why you should not ask this boy if you have offended him, since he has told the other boy that he still likes you.

Wanted—Consolation

DEAR MISS GALE:

I met a girl about two months ago and fell deeply in love with her. She is living with her aunt, as her home is not in Pittsburgh. I learned, through her that she had been keeping steady company with a boy friend from her home town. Although she showed her love for this young man she did not refuse to go out with me at any time. As days passed by I grew more fond of her and still feel that I would do anything to win her love. I know that she liked me, but neither of us mentioned anything of her love for me. It was a long time since she had heard from her boy friend or seen him and she began to think that she did not care for him as much as she thought. Before going back home for the Christmas holidays she said that she would not make up with him, but would come back to Pittsburgh and try to be happy here. She came back a week later and I knew right away that she had made up with him. She finally said that she was very sorry, but she had tried her best to care for me as I cared for her, but couldn't, and that she was secretly engaged. It all seemed truthful to me and I was hurt very much. Now, I don't know whether it was because she was sorry for me or not, but she promised that if she felt the least bit of affection for me she would let me know. Broken-hearted I left, but only to return again, as I could not stay away from her. I have been out with her several times since then. I'll never give her up, but would like to have your advice. She promised to be faithful to him and yet will go out with me. Hoping for a consoling answer I am

WANTED—CONSOLATION.

This girl seems to be playing you two men against each other. The best way to have her make up her mind is for you to stay away from her for awhile. Not seeing either of you, she may be able to make a choice.

Kelly the Sheik

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a boy in my late 'teens and considered very popular. I have known a certain girl for three years. Lately she won't let me come to see her, only on Sunday night. She goes out every night with a different fellow. Now, my problem is this: For about three months she has never answered any of my letters. What would you advise me to do?

KELLY THE SHEIK.

I am afraid you must accept the fact that she doesn't like you as well as she did. If I were you I would stop trying to see her, since it must annoy her.

Nobody's Sweetheart

DEAR MISS GALE:

Please, may I address my letter to "Unhappy?" Listen, Unhappy, I am addressing my letter to you because I am of the same age and position as yours. I'll admit that at times I tease and cry for at least some freedom at night (like the other girls have), but, no, my parents are firm, and I have to be home (if I go to some movie in the afternoon) no later than 6 o'clock. But, listen, Unhappy, even though I do feel blue and broken-hearted because I have no fellows like other girls my age have, I love my mother and dad—yes, I love them even though at times I feel miserable and term them old-fashioned and unjust. I love them and I think that God gave me the most patient and best mother and dad in the world, even though I am restricted and don't have the freedom of other girls. Think it over, Unhappy, and after you have given yourself time to think it over you'll know that they are doing what's best. After all isn't a girl taking a slim chance nowadays to go out at night? You know, too, that after all God in one of his commandments ordered us to honor our mother and father. Doesn't He know what is best for us younger ones? Don't think I'm old-fashioned, because I'm up to date in everything except freedom at nights, petting and dancing. I play a saxaphone as well as a piano, and I certainly can play. Please listen to me, Unhappy; better days are coming, wait and see, and above all trust God. As ye sow so shall you reap. I know even though I am

NOBODY'S SWEETHEART.

Your advice is excellent, my dear.

Kitty

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a reader of your column and would like some of your wonderful advice. There is a young man lives in the same town as I do. I am not wild about him, but would like to go with him because he is a nice fellow and knows how to keep his place and treat a girl when he is in her company. I have been out with him once, but I see him every day and he doesn't seem to ask to take me out. When I was out with him I did not neck, smoke or allow him to kiss me, as I do not think it is right. I would like to go to a show the club is giving. Would it be all right for me to ask him to go? Please tell me what I am to do.

KITTY.

If taking you to the show doesn't entail any expense for this young man, it would be all right to invite him to accompany you. But never ask any man to take you to a place of entertainment where he must pay an admission fee.

Horoscope

Sunday, March 18

SUNDAY'S horoscope shows things prospering and auspicious for all that relates to affairs of church and clergy, as well as magistrates and military men. It is a time to plan and execute bold strokes in connection with these or in reconstructive efforts of a governmental nature requiring secret manipulation. Domestic and social entanglements may be involved.

Those whose birthday it is may plan for an active year, with the energies and initiative directed to bold strokes which may lead toward some form of public benefit or reconstruction.

A child born on this day may have a spirit of initiative and enterprise which may lead it into peculiar contacts. A successful career is probable.

Notable Nativity: Grover Cleveland, President of the United States.

Monday, March 19

Monday's astrological forecast is for important events which may radically react on the career. Important changes or travel of a sudden and precipitate nature are imminent. These may have a social and domestic as well as a business bearing, possibly in connection with new ventures; but in these proper precaution is enjoined.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of important events, possibly of an unforeseen nature and involving radical moves. These may have domestic, social, romantic as well as business angles. But in all, be on guard against subtlety or duplicity.

A child born on this day should be versatile and well equipped for a career of importance or adventure. It may likewise have a happy and socially notable life.

Notable Nativity: William Jennings Bryan, American statesman and lecturer.

SAYINGS OF MRS. SOLOMON

By HELEN ROWLAND

CANNED LINES

THE way of a man with women, O my Daughter, is stranger than fiction and more astonishing than truth!

For every man hath a method and a favorite "stunt," which he calleth his "line." And the line which he hath found to work successfully with one damsel shall be practiced upon each woman in turn, the old and the young, the fair and the unfair, the wise and the frivolous. For discrimination is not IN him!

Lo, one man shall come unto thee saying, "How foolish are the sentimentalists! But as for ME, I seek only a woman's friendship! For kisses are cheap and plentiful, and I am sick of sex appeal. But a good little PAL is a wonderful thing!"

HELEN ROWLAND

Yet, I say unto thee, seek diligently among his "women friends," and in all their number thou shalt not find a PLAIN damsel, nor one that is unkissable. For this is the Platonic Line.

But another shall try thee by a bolder method. Lo, suddenly and without warning he shall snatch thee in his arms and seek to take thee by storm and tempestuous lovemaking. For he believeth that the shortest distance in the world is that between the introduction and the kiss.

Yet, I charge thee, be not flattered, but put him down without mercy. For this is the CAVE MAN Line, and only the foolish and the simple continue to fall for it. But to the Wise Damsel, it is as a cheap perfume, sickening.

And still another shall seek to conquer thee with subtility. He sitteth afar and talketh of love in the abstract. His eyes speak unutterable things; but his words are always impersonal. He praiseth the wave in thine hair and the beauty of thine ankle, yet toucheth not so much as the tips of thy fingers!

For he thinketh in his heart, "I shall keep her guessing. Yea, I shall wrack her soul with plans to bring me to subjection. And when she can no longer endure her curiosity, then will she seek to lure me, and I shall gather her in mine arms without trouble.

But, O my Daughter, each of these is but as a kindergarden game unto an international contest beside him that playeth the FRANKLY DEVOTED.

For all women are as one woman unto him—and that one EASY. Lo, the look of "adoration" in his eyes, like the tender word on his lips, is ALWAYS there; and he donneth his "caressing manner" with his collar. He is SO attentive!

Yea, though there be twenty damsels in the room, yet shall each be made to think in her heart, "Lo, I am IT!"

* * *

And all the days of his life, he shall be adored, and petted and coddled by women, and his feet shall not stumble.

Wavy Hair Possible With Care

By MARIA JERITZA

THAT brushing beautifies the hair has become trite information. But the fact remains that systematic, vigorous brushing is the very best means of stimulating circulation of blood throughout the scalp, feeding the hair cells with oxygen, distributing oil evenly throughout the hair and giving it silky, smooth gloss.

Use a brush that is easily washable, with short wire bristles not too stiff. If you have military brushes and can use both at once, one in each hand, so much the better, for you will kill two birds with one stone and exercise your arms as well as massage your scalp vigorously.

When your scalp tingles deliciously you will know that you have achieved the main object of your brushing by stimulating circulation. Your hair will also look silky and gleam with reflected lights. It is well, after arranging it for the day, to brush it smoothly in place.

IT IS true that brushing loosens the wave of the hair. But in these days of long, loose waves, this is really an advantage, and will give a marcel all the subtle grace of the most skilful finger wave.

Brushing may remove a little of the natural wave of your hair, but the curl will return quickly. Brushing also invigorates both hair and scalp. As for the water wave, it may be well to do your main brushing at night, before you set your wave, just before you retire. If you are trying to keep a water wave exactly "as is" overnight, omit your brushing for that night and give your scalp instead a gentle massage. But as a rule, slightly loosening it with moderate brushing does not destroy the wave.

FRENCH women wear dainty, filmy nightcaps when they wish to preserve a coiffure absolutely undisturbed for the following day. This is a good idea, as the shaped cap is far more comfortable than a veil fastened in place with hairpins or safety pins.

PLEASANT RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Shoulders droop under weight of years. Young, yet beauty has fled. Cheeks are sallow and drawn. Unsightly pimples. Keep your system clean and you keep the beauty of youth. Its energy. Its irresistible charm. Then life is not a failure.

Clogged bowels and inactive liver cause poisons to seep through the system. Health vanishes and with it beauty and energy. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets will save you from this dark hour. For 20 years they have been prescribed in place of calomel to men and women seeking health and freedom from constipation. They act easily and smoothly. No dangerous griping. Take nightly before retiring. Results will amaze you.

Wall St. Gambling Alarms; How Ballard Won Big Job.

By B. C. FORBES

WHEN giants fall out, pigmies should beware. Gambling giants are waging fierce battle on the New York Stock Exchange. What the final upshot will be, even they themselves don't know. Severe wounds have already been inflicted upon many "shorts." The bulls may next find themselves suffering.

This is an ideal time to leave stock market speculation alone.

THEY are now calling it a "spring lamb market."

"The most alarming condition in America today is the dangerous pool speculation running wild in Wall street," was the first comment made on reaching New York by Herbert Fleishhacker, leading San Francisco banker. "Every conservative bank and every conservative brokerage house frowns upon what is happening. Too many of the newer brokers, as well as too many of the public, either ignorant or forgetful of what has happened in the past, have got it into their heads that because it has been found possible to send this, that and the next stock skyrocketing, the skyrocketing process will have no end. The reckless manipulation and the blind buying now raging are deplorable in the extreme."

He added: "You cannot render any greater service than utter a warning against it through your column. It can be regarded only as a menace to the orderly conduct of the finance and business of the country. The present pool recklessness has gone beyond anything the country has ever known in the past. Everything possible should be done to curb it before the disaster occurs."

BERNARD M. BARUCH was among the earliest heavy buyers of Radio Corporation stock. He told me long before the sensational manipulation of it started that he always had confidence that the radio industry would reach very large proportions. He did not for a moment, however, expect to see the shares forced to such heights ($160) at this early day. Neither, for that matter, did the responsible men connected with the corporation. The sensational rise is wholly the work of daring speculators who are squeezing shorts.

MANY men want to know how they can qualify for a $50,000-a-year job. How one man has just won the presidency of a $500,000,000 corporation will interest them.

Russell H. Ballard, who yesterday (Friday) was elected president of the Southern California Edison Company in succession to John B. Miller, who becomes chairman, realized years ago the wisdom of old John D. Rockefeller's counsel, "Next to doing the right thing, the most important thing in the world is to let the people know you are doing the right thing."

Ballard's climb from the bottom to the top has been achieved without "pull," without inherited wealth, without anything but the customary success qualities of native ability, industriousness, vision—plus his aliveness to the value of going straightforwardly to the public with all the facts and appealing for fair play, nothing more, nothing less. Full publicity and above-boardness were not accepted as they are today when Ballard first began to advocate and adopt them.

Oftener than once California has proposed to raise gigantic sums to take over utility corporations for state ownership and operation. Ballard's policy of going to the people with all cards face up resulted in the rejection of public ownership each time. Had the electric light and power companies adhered to the old-time practice of secrecy, political huggermuggery and high-handed treatment of the people, unquestionably the voting would have gone the other way.

It is only a few months since the Pacific Gas and Electric Company elected a new president, A. F. Hockenbeamer, who also is a warm advocate of the above-board policies of his lamented predecessor, Wigginton E. Creed. You can confidently count upon the energetic upbuilding, under Ballard and Hockenbeamer, of California's two leading hydro-electric enterprises. To handle big business successfully, you must now learn to handle men successfully and to handle the public successfully.

BUSINESS sentiment is somewhat cheerier.

This column recently described the wrong institution as "the largest bank in the South." This distinction belongs to the Canal Bank and Trust Company, of New Orleans. Its resources exceed $100,000,000. Its new bank building is a massive, imposing structure, comparable with the finest banking homes in New York.

It is this institution, presided over by James P. Butler, that is generally credited with having issued the first $10 notes of the Confederacy, nicknamed "Dixies," a name later applied to the entire South. That New Orleans is proud of its towering Canal Bank is demonstrated by the number of protests received against the mistake made in this column—although it should be added that not one of the protests came from the bank itself.

STOCKS SWEEP UPWARD, FEW CHECKED

NEW YORK, March 17.—(AP.)—Heavy profit-taking checked the advance in a few issues in today's stock market, but the general list swept forward in impressive fashion, setting a flock of new high records. So great was the volume of trading that the ticker had fallen 20 minutes behind the market during the second hour, but the transactions generally were in much smaller lots than a week ago. The day's sales aggregated 1,900,000 shares.

Railroad shares, which have been lagging behind the industrials, were in the forefront of today's advance. Gains in that group ranged from 1 to 5 points, with about a dozen issues in new high ground.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, March 17.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 16 to 19 points on further active covering or trade and commission house buying inspired by the firmness of Liverpool, reports of excessive rains in the eastern belt and clearing colder weather in the southwest. Prices made new high ground for the movement, selling up to 19.28c for May and 18.83c for October, but there was considerable realizing for over the week-end coupled with some southern selling and prices eased off 8 or 10 points from the best by the end of the first half hour. Private cables reported covering, good calling, with local, continental and Indian buying in Liverpool, and said there was an improved demand for piece goods from India. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 121,000 bales against 182,000 last year.

Futures closed steady, 13 to 17 points higher. March, 19.13c; May, 19.23@19.25c; July, 19.06c; October, 18.76@18.78c; December, 18.73c; spot steady; middling, 19.65c.

NARROW CHANGES IN MAIN LIST

There was a little activity in Lone Star Gas on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange during today's short session, with the price rising moderately as traders purchased the stock in the hope of a sympathetic movement with the oil and gas issues on the New York market.

The business in Lone Star was in rather light volume, but the price tendency was definitely upward, the stock showing the first noticeable strength in several weeks. The company declared the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share yesterday. Some time ago a capital increase from $30,000,000 to $50,000,000 was authorized by the stockholders and there is a feeling in some quarters that a stock distribution will be made later this year.

Miscellaneous issues were dull and unchanged. Standard Sanitary continued to hover around $35 a share, while Blaw Knox Steel was handled in small lots at prices between 104 and 105. There was a little trading in the William Zoller issues at prices showing no change from previous quotations and Witherow Steel preferred sold at 70, up 1¾ from the last previous sale.

New Threat for Mid-Continent.

A dispatch from Tulsa, Okla., today said: "If the National Transit Lines moves crude oil from the Atlantic Seaboard to interior refiners it will mean further reconstruction of the markets for Mid-Continent crude oil, according to a prominent Mid-Continent operator. The heavy movement of crude oil from West Texas and Venezuela has already reduced the markets for Mid-Continent crude on both the Atlantic and Gulf coast." The National Transit Company announced earlier this week that within 30 days it would start the movement of oil westward from the Atlantic seaboard through its lines.

Solving the Problems that Confront Your Estate

Money Takes Wings

FEW who are left the proceeds of life insurance in cash invest it wisely or keep it long. The temptation is to spend it quickly. That is why so many women and children for whom life insurance was purchased as a protection find within a few years that the money has taken wings and flown away.

The wise plan in buying life insurance is to create a Trust to receive the proceeds of policies in order that the estate may be carefully invested and conserved for the real protection of those for whom it is intended.

Our Trust Officers will be pleased to give full particulars regarding Life Insurance Trusts, small or large.

RAP POWER TRUST

HIT DECEPTION IN $1,000,000 PROPAGANDA

By JOHN T. LAMBERT,
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—More than $1,000,000 a year is being spent in lobby, propaganda and other activities by the National Electric Light Association, a single unit of the power trust, according to an official report made to the United States Senate by the Federal Trade Commission, it has been learned.

The association is one of a group of public utility organizations which supports the power trust lobby in Washington headed by Josiah T. Newcomb.

Newcomb is the man who said their purpose was to get Muscle Shoals, to stop the Walsh resolution for investigation of the alleged trust and to prevent the passage of the Boulder Canyon Dam bill unless it was amended to suit their desires.

AND CONSUMER PAYS

Most of the $1,000,000 fund is assessed upon local power corporations, who collect it from the consumers who buy electric power.

At least a quarter of the fund is shown by the commission's report to have been spent to influence public opinion for private operation and against public operation of power companies.

Secret employing of college professors to teach their students the "virtues" of the corporations was roundly denounced by the commission.

In these efforts, the National Electric Light Association was shown by the commission to regard itself as "the voice of the electric industry."

"Bruce Barton envelope suffers" cost the association—and ultimately the consumers—$175,000, the report shows. Barton, New York newspaper and magazine writer, who prepared some of President Coolidge's campaign material, was hired by the association to write a series of honey articles in praise of the power corporations and in discouragement to public ownership. These articles were stuffed into the envelopes containing the monthly bills of the consumers.

SOUGHT HARVARD CHAIR

The report shows that in 1923, the National Electric Light Association began the establishment of a $30,000 fund to organize at Harvard University a "research staff in public utility management."

In one of the public utility courses established in the University of Colorado, 17 of the lecturers were found by the commission to be holding prominent positions with the telephone, street railway and power corporations of Denver.

One of the funds created by the association has been to devise a new set of college and school textbooks that will be more favorable to the industry.

Denouncing these alleged attempts of the power trust to "undermine" the integrity of universities and colleges, the commission said in its report to the Senate:

"The right of the industry to present its case before the bar of public opinion is unquestioned, provided such representation is made openly in the name of the industry, and therefore, without even a semblance of deception such as may be involved in subsidizing authors, teachers, universities or research organizations in order that inspired textbooks or other material may be given greater credibility because issued over the names of supposedly impartial writers.

"Where this is done, the general public may well question whether the scientific attitude and integrity of established institutions of higher learning are not being undermined."

The Elshuco Trio, William Kroll, violin; Willem Willeke, violoncello, and Aurelio Giorni, pianist, gave a beautiful concert in Carnegie Music Hall last night, closing the Art Society's present season. With the program came the stunning list of attractions for next season. While scanning the array of stars, our only wish was that under the new management the Art Society will not become merely a concert bureau to bring box office attractions, but will continue its policy that provided us with such music as the trio gave us last night.

With the exception of the Flonzaley Quartet, I know of no other chamber music organization that gives such utter satisfaction as the Elshuco Trio. Their ideals are the same; including a piano their music is slightly more popular than a quartet score. All three men are virtuosi and individual, yet the ensemble is of flawless unity. For me their playing has never been academic, and never before has it been so piquant as last night.

The Brahms Trio is one of this composer's earlier works, in which the broad cantilena of the opening bars is the keynote of the entire trio. The Brahms idiom is ever present, but he was less puzzling than at a later age. Although its themes were very clearly outlined, and the pattern was always obvious, its mathematics could not detract from the beauty of tone nor the pleasant flow of its melody. Paul Juon is a newcomer; a great teacher of composition in Berlin, he remains at the listening post of all new works. Although slightly under the spell of the new school, and while by no means a reactionary, he keeps well within the stockade of the old clan. His Litanies are richly woven; placed between Brahms and Tschaikowsky, they confessed their ancestry with no difficulty. As encores the trio played two movements from a quartet of Loillet, and the scherzo from the Brahms C Minor.

ONE-ARM DEATH DRIVER GETS 6 MONTHS

Convicted as a "one-armed" driver responsible for the death of a child celebrating her eighth birthday, Charles Gerwig, 22, of 404 Hemlock street, was sentenced to the workhouse for six months by Judge Thomas D. Carnahan yesterday in Criminal Court.

"It's about time that automobile drivers take notice that there are other people on the streets," declared Judge Carnahan, denying a plea for a parole. Gerwig's mother fainted when sentence was passed and was carried from the courtroom.

Gerwig was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter January 5. He was accused of killing Melvin Hackett, Jr., of 911 Columbus avenue, North Side, as the lad crossed Columbus avenue near B. street July 24 last to summon his father home for a celebration of his eighth birthday. Gerwig was driving rapidly with one arm about a girl companion and crushed the boy against a pole, snapping off a section of the pole with the upper section remaining suspended to the wires, according to the testimony.

WOMAN SLAYER GETS 20 YRS.

Mrs. Theresa Bess, 22, Negro, was sentenced to the workhouse for 5 to 20 years by Visiting Judge Charles M. Culver in Criminal Court yesterday. She had entered a plea of guilty to a charge of murder and the crime was fixed by the court at second degree murder.

The testimony showed that, intoxicated, she went to a party at House No. 35, Cliff Mine, the night of November 9. She induced Robert Halsley, 26, Negro, to go to the porch and there shot him. She testified that she did not recall the circumstances. No motive was shown. Mrs. Bess and her 4-year-old child were deserted two years ago by her husband and she conducted a boarding house at Cliff Mine.

ANSWERS RAP AT RED CROSS

Criticism of the American Red Cross cited in the testimony of Rev. Charles F. Fehrenbach, pastor of the Catholic Church of the Nativity, Broughton, before the Senate mine strike investigating committee, is answered in a re-statement of the attitude of the Red Cross. A. K. Oliver, president of the Pittsburgh chapter of the Red Cross, set forth some time ago that the organization took no part in relief measures in industrial disputes.

Mr. Oliver pointed out that the Red Cross acts in extending relief only in cases of emergency caused by the elements or by pestilence and in furnishing medical aid, nurses and assistance to victims of disasters. Such being its policy, he said, it would not be expected to act in the mine strike.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Mary J. Kain:

"It seems we scarcely knew her,
In her many years on earth,
Nor realized till she had gone
Her wondrous woman's worth.
With aching hearts we know too late,
There never was another,
So fine and true the whole way through
As she whom we called—Mother."

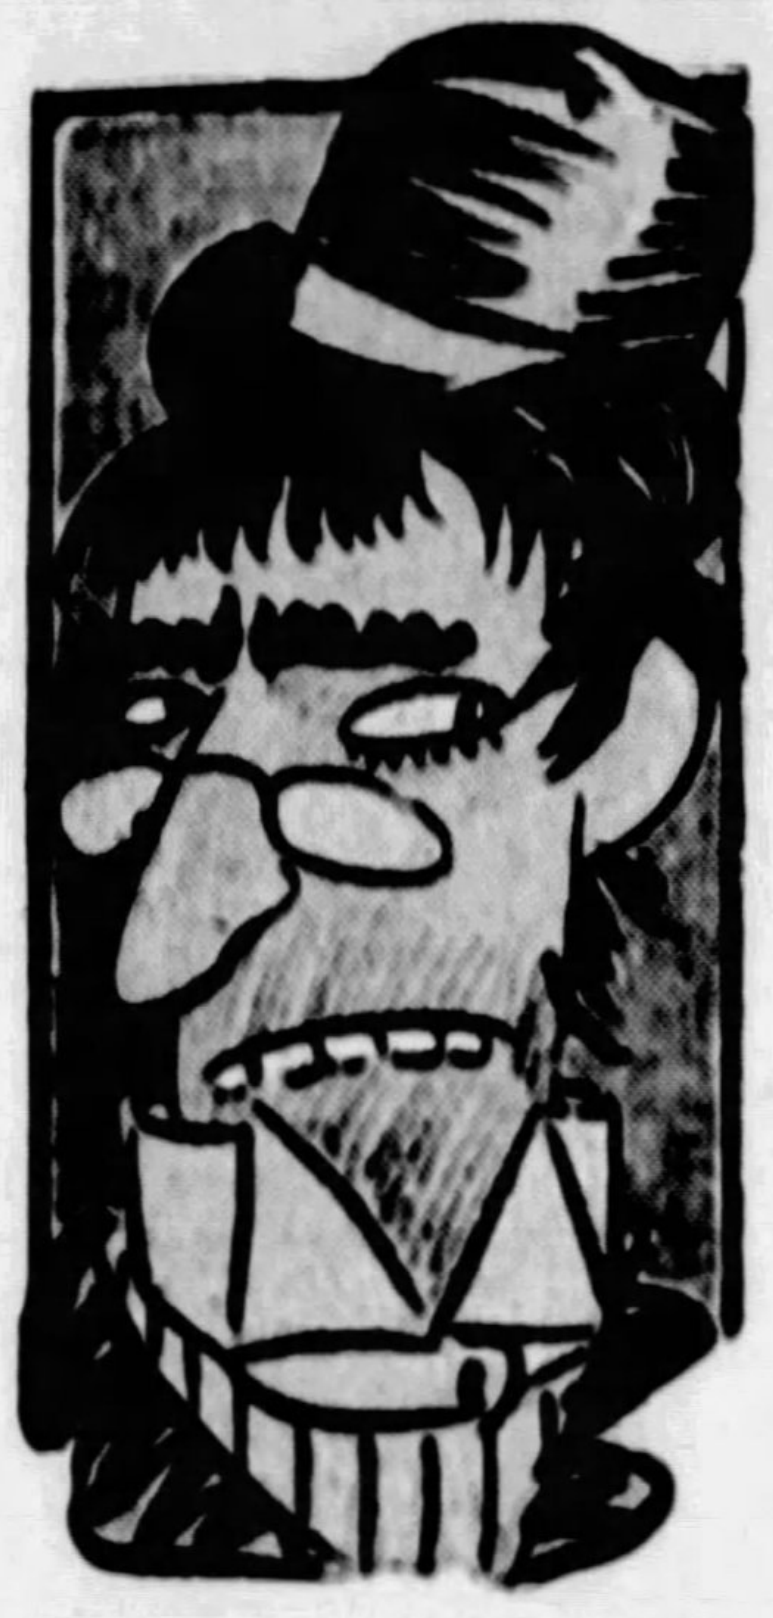
An Open Letter to the Common People



Congressman Frisby's attorney, who is a visitor in our city today.

ON BEHALF of numerous patriotic organizations, and particularly The Frisby Club of Weehawken, the serial publication of "The Congressman's Son" will be discontinued.

Although loath to take this step—it seems, information to the contrary notwithstanding, that the principles of Americanism for which, no doubt, there are, regardless of opinons otherwise stated, certain exigencies, if not paramount, at least a solution should be forthcoming without equivocation, whereas on the other hand a misapprehension may arise. If not then it is not what it is in case it was.

At the time the manuscript was left under our door, no mention was made of any traveling salesman employed by the Golf States and Un-Alaska Door to Door Brush Company. That he could throw light on the entire deplorable affair never entered the heads of any of our departments.

However, if Congressman Frisby has been wronged he can seek damages in a court of law.

Dear Editor:

I had to attend a directors' meeting at my bank last evening. Imagine my embarrassment, on arriving home directly from it, to have my wife find my pockets full of serpentine paper, gin corks, three slave bracelets and a lipstick. My wife says that I am overworked and not quite myself, or I would never have brought those perfectly useless things from the drug store next to the bank.

BUGS BAER Says

THE congressional arguments on Hoover indicate that political bedfellows have strange insomnia.

The Hoover literary and debating society spent this official week in picking the feathers off a favorite son.

It seems to us that the Republicans are wasting a lot of abuse in March which should be saved for October.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

Ever since the radio made a glass house of political conventions and transformed secret covenants into open plumbing, the public has finally realized that national politics is a herring that has been out of water too long.

That last congressional argument on the Hon. Herbert was a family quarrel with Democratic strangers at the feast.

It was strictly Republican, with Brand, of Ohio, taking the negative and Burton of the same state taking what was left.

When the vote was checked up, Burton won by a consensus of departing feet and an overwhelming majority of cat-calls and recalls.

Brand turned state's evidence and denounced Hoover as an enemy of the farmer, a step-child of the League of Nations and a free trader.

It was with difficulty that the onlooking Democrats restrained themselves from rushing out and exchanging their rain checks for active membership in this sun-kissed debate.

Then Burton arose and defended Hoover so well that he ran out of gestures in the middle of his speech.

Love letters written by Brand to Hoover in 1925 were exhibited and read, but the meeting adjourned before the amount of alimony was fixed.

One Democrat bolted his party for the legislative pleasure of taking sides in the enemy chinfest. He couldn't sit silent while fingers were to be pointed or Republicans to be denounced.

The debate educated the Democrats to the extent that they now realize that they are not the only people who hate each other.

Hoover can now understand what Roosevelt meant when he said that he had suffered more in the hands of his friends than he did at the boots of his enemies.

A tradesman was taken suddenly ill and died. His bookkeeper found the next day a letter the tradesman had written but not sealed. The bookkeeper sealed and sent the letter, having added the following postscript:

"After writing the above, I suddenly passed away."

Well Meant

Jenkins had come into a fortune, and his friends were giving him good advice.

"Don't forget, my dear fellow," said one, "that a fool and his money are soon parted."

"Oh, but I'm sure," said another, "Jenkins is going to be the exception that proves the rule!"

And Jenkins felt he had been paid a real compliment!

No Trick About It

"With a single stroke of a brush," said the school teacher, taking his class round the National Gallery, "Joshua Reynolds could change a smiling face to a frowning one."

"So can my mother," said a small boy.

As He Had Sowed

The old swindler had been caught in the end, and now he sat in prison making sacks.

The amiable visitor approached him and said:

"What are you doing, my man—sewing?"

"No," was the reply, "reaping."

Blue Laws' Modification Indorsed by Legislator

If there be any effort made in the next General Assembly to modernize the musty old blue laws to make them applicable to the spirit of modern life, the movement will have the support of William F. Stadtlander to the extent of modification that would permit amateur sports and Sunday concerts and other recreational activities for which no admission is charged.

Mr. Stadtlander, who is chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, says that if he is re-elected and Sunday law modification comes up in the legislature it will have his active approval. He feels, properly, we maintain, that there should be a fifty-fifty operation of life's privileges. He can see no justice in a condition which permits a rich man to get into his car, ride to his country club and play golf, while the poor man, who plays ball, is arrested and fined, and thousands of others who derive recreation and pleasure through watching the game are denied an American right.

Mr. Stadtlander's ideas will meet with commendation of many Pennsylvanians who deplore the fact that the boast of freedom in this state is an empty one as long as the blue laws stand as a barrier to the Sunday enjoyment of clean, wholesome and moral recreation that normal life needs and must have.

Such a development will surely come if men in public life, as Mr. Stadtlander is, gain a realization of the injustice that exists in the operation of the antiquated blue laws, which were enacted more than a century and a quarter ago, when living and the pleasures of life were entirely different from what they are today.

Slot Machines Operate; Police Should Get Busy

A young mail truck driver was placed under arrest for abandoning his truck, taking another truck that was parked and going to another town. It is said his actions were prompted by the fact that he had lost money in slot machine gambling.

A McKeesport man who said he had lost money in slot gambling machines was arrested when using counterfeit coins in order to recoup his losses. When the court heard his story and was told of his good character he was fined $1,000 and paroled for a year.

These incidents form two stories in the news of a single day. The evidence that "you can't beat the machine" probably will have no effect on the poor dupes who make the operations of the slot machine ring profitable. But the matter should be significant to law enforcement officers. It proves again that gambling not only is a crime in itself, but is a prolific breeder of other crimes.

Why are these machines permitted to take the money of deluded victims? Some of the police certainly should know they are in operation. Some of the constables should know it too. We surmise that, because an alderman in Pittsburgh recently went out and cleaned his ward, confiscating a number of machines.

It is high time other officers got busy.

Futile League of Nations; U. S. Is Well Out of It

The Council of the League of Nations has adjourned after another futile session.

Costa Rica has left the League. Brazil, after the necessary notice of withdrawal, will quit in June and Spain in September.

Mussolini, as in the case of Corfu, has again snapped his fingers in the face of the League. This time the question is the interception of a trainload of machine guns from Italy into Hungary to arm one of the Central Powers, in defiance of the peace treaty of Trianon. The Little Entente, intent on keeping Hungary down, demanded action. The League Council, threatened by Mussolini, has decided that it cannot report on the matter until June.

The Rumanian member absented himself from the last meeting of the League Council, because France and England were taking the side of the Hungarian landowners in their complaint against expropriation of their property in Transylvania, transferred to Rumania in the peace treaty. This matter is likewise adjourned until June.

Polish and Lithuanian representatives, after shaking their [illegible] each other's faces, went home without any settlement of the controversy over Vilna, the district which Lithuania says [illegible] stolen by armed force.

[illegible] United States can thank fortune that it is not a party to a league which makes even unsuccessful attempts to settle these highly explosive quarrels between the combative nationalities of the Old World.

We have in our midst Italians and Serbs, French and Germans, Hungarians and Rumanians, Poles and Lithuanians. They live together here in peace and harmony. They came here to escape the war-breeding systems of Europe.

As American citizens they rejoice that their government is staying aloof from the perils which they escaped. For us to be a member of the League and participate in deciding European quarrels would be to sow discord and civil hatred in breasts of our own foreign-born population.

Meanwhile, the "disarmament" committees of the League continue their work. Up to date they have produced more than seven million words of speeches covering thirteen thousand printed pages, but not one gun less in Europe.

Unpopular Divorces

Views of divorce vary, but on one point there is substantial unanimity in this country. The recent American habit of seeking them abroad has not caught popular favor.

If the French courts are at last inclining to curb their use by infelicitous American tourists, it will not endanger their repute here.

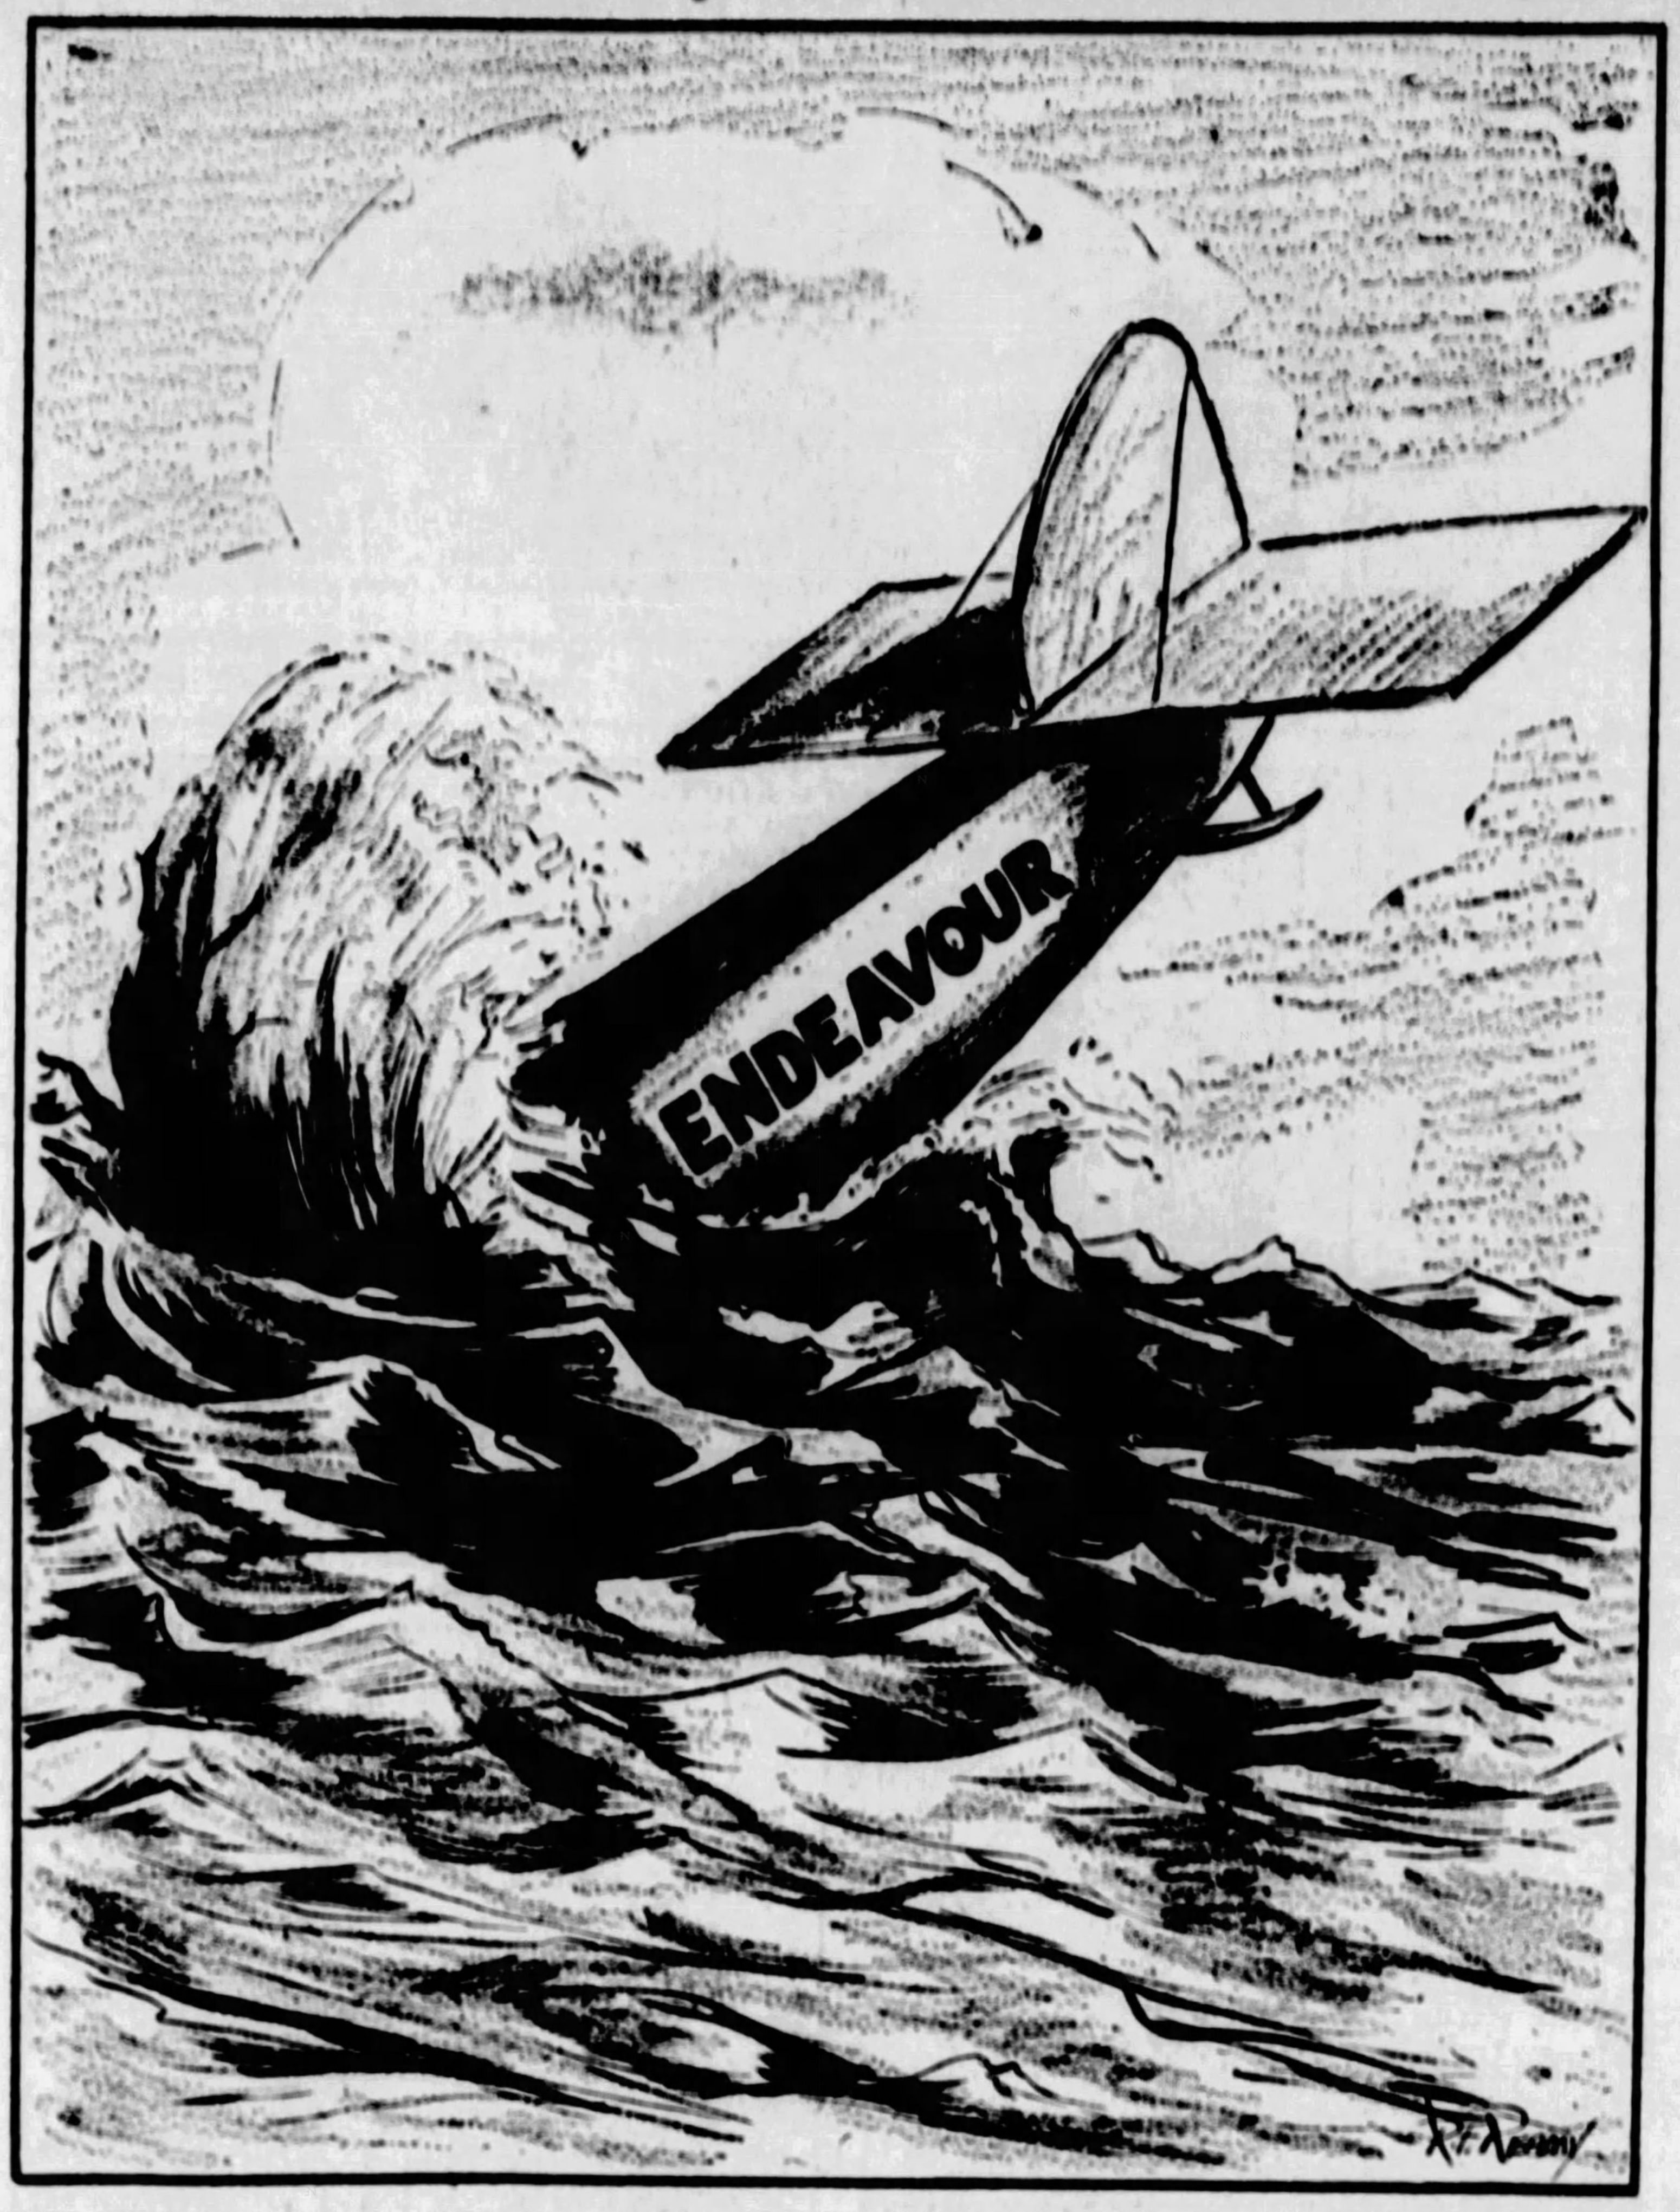
"The Path of Glory Leads But to the Grave"



Garrett P. Serviss Says:

A Universe Travel Society

THERE has recently been founded in Moscow the most up-to-date and up-to-snuff society yet on record. Translated into French, its title is "Societe des Voyagers de l'Univers." It appeals for the co-operation of all who wish to interest themselves in the realization of "sidereal cruisers," with a view to end the isolation of the inhabitants of our little planet in the midst of so many fascinating planetary and stellar neighbors.

This daring society, to whom the imagination appears as the most natural yoke-fellow for invention, has set the ball rolling by an exhibition held in Tverskaia street, Moscow, where were collected a variety of documents and writings pertaining to the subject of interplanetary communication, together with models of the various devices that have been contrived for the purpose of testing the possibility of human flight between the earth and other worlds.

There were to be seen many ingenious constructions designed to set man free from the tyranny of gravitation, which, if they have not proved their practicability, do not in that respect fall below the similar failures that lie heaped before the threshold of every great mechanical triumph that has cost long centuries of effort.

Particularly interesting, and significant of encouragement, were the models of different kinds of repeating skyrockets, including the inventions of Messrs. Ziolkovsky, Ribaltchicht, Goddard, Obert and others. Ribaltchicht claims to have begun his experiments as long ago as 1881. Goddard is our own Professor Goddard of Clark University, whose "moon-rocket," as it has popularly been called, although its inventor has specifically aimed only at attaining the upper levels of the earth's atmosphere, has been familiar to newspaper readers for several years past.

Curiously enough, just at the time when this singular movement has attracted attention in Moscow, in France a prize called the "Prix Rep-Hirsch" has been established by a so-called "Commission Astronautique," for the purpose of encouraging original efforts in the same direction. This commission expresses faith in the future of the skyrocket idea, at least as far as concerns the thorough exploration of our atmosphere to its uttermost limits, and ventures "to dream of a more complete evasion when, liberated by its speed from attractive servitude to the globe, the vehicle shall traverse the sidereal abyss to attain the confines of a new world."

The Astronomical Society of France has accepted the charge of annually awarding the prize of 5,000 francs offered by the Astronautique Commission (note the word "astronautique," meaning "sky or star navigation"), but it gives notice that it will not lend itself to any "seductive Utopia," or leave room for any "equivoque."

It is not for this generation to look forward to taking return trip tickets to the Moon, Mars or Venus. But the idea is in the air; let us see it develop into reality if it can.

Once Overs

Look at Yourself

YOU like to study people—find it interesting?

Ever studied yourself?

This ought to interest you if you can see yourself impersonally, as others see you.

You might come to some surprising conclusion: you might be disappointed and shocked, too, at seeing yourself in a true light.

Naturally, you have emphasized to yourself the good traits you have.

But how often have you weighed honestly the many unfavorable characteristics you possess?

Not often, have you?

Of course you know and you don't try to hide the fact that you have several mean things in your make-up.

But it is pretty easy to forget your own failings and believe that most folk are not quite as good as you are.

But isn't this a poor excuse to make for yourself?

You do not spare others when you analyze them. Why favor yourself?

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

Looking Back

LOOKING back, as I grow old,
  I can see my course unfold,
Rivers bending, turning,
  Marsh lights, gleaming burning,
Mountain summits white and cold.

Ways that were all dark to me
As I trod them, now I see
  Robbed of one-time sadness,
  Blossom into gladness,
Changed to joyous ways, and free.

Viewed through time's bright mists of gold,
As a tale that now is told,
  Life seems sweet and tender,
  Strangely filled with splendor,
Looking back as I grow old.

Tales that are Told

Not Worth Having

A WOMAN who had bought a front-row seat for a matinee performance of a certain play returned to the box-office at its conclusion and demanded the return of her money.

The man in the box was aghast, for the show was the success of the season.

"Didn't you like the play?" he asked.

"Yes, the play's all right," replied the woman. "But I asked for a front seat in the circle."

"Well, you had a seat in the front row," protested the other. "The ticket shows that. Look—Row A." He handed back the counterfoil she had given him.

"Oh, yes, I know," she retorted. "But there was nobody behind me!"

Character Reading

A WOMAN advertised for a man to work in her garden, and two men applied for the job. While she was interviewing them she noticed that her mother was making signs to her to choose the shorter one of the men, which she did.

When the women were alone, the daughter said: "Why did you signal to me to choose the shorter man, mother? The other had a much better face."

"Face!" exclaimed the other. "When you pick a man to work in your garden you want to go by his trousers. If they're patched on his knees, you want him; if they're patched on the seat, you don't."—The Humorist.

Price of Science

THE landlady noticed with unfeigning dismay that her new lodger's fire consumed more coal than she had been accustomed to provide for it. She mentioned the fact.

"Oh, yes," explained the ingenious young man. "You see, I always place the lump of coal on the fire in such a way that the grain is perpendicular—that is, running up and down. It makes a much better fire—nothing like a little science, you know."

The unimpressed landlady spoke in a hard voice that almost stopped the lodger's watch: "I always charge sixpence extra for scientific gents."—London Tit-Bits.

Very Confusing

FROM head to heel she was exquisitely modern, and the shopwalker to whom this fair young thing had beckoned felt his heart beat all the faster at the honor done him.

She asked him where she could get "pencils for the eyebrows."

Unfortunately, the shopwalker was inclined to deafness, and he misunderstood her.

"The stationery section is upstairs, madam—" he began.

"But I want them for eyebrows," interrupted the slim young woman, somewhat puzzled.

"Oh, highbrow stuff! Better ask them at the book counter," came the astounding reply.—London Answers.

LISTEN, WORLD! ELSIE ROBINSON Says: A Mended Life

It wasn't the cleaner's fault—it was that kind of a blouse—easily spoiled. And there I was with a blouse on my hands, spoiled in spots, but still too good to throw away.

For a long time I let it lie idle. I had lost my interest in it. It did not seem possible that I could ever use it again. Then one day I needed it and I began to think how I could repair it.

I had some bits of lovely silk, a skein of wool, two quaint old buttons. My imagination gathered them together, my fingers drew the needle in and out—and once more I had a blouse that was fit to use. It was, in fact, lovelier than it had ever been. For I had put myself into the remaking of my blouse and, whereas before it had been simply something to wear, now it was part of me.

Fate spoiled my life.

It wasn't Fate's fault. It was that kind of a life—something was bound to spoil it—sooner or later. And there I was with a life on my hands, faded and shrunk and torn, yet still too good to throw away.

For a long time I let my life lie idle. I had lost my interest in it. It did not seem possible that joy and pride and hope could ever be mine again. But one day I realized that my life was needed—I MUST go on. So slowly, reluctantly, I began to think how I might mend my broken self again.

I had lost much, but there still remained some things I had not valued in the days of my careless happiness.

Courage—there had been no need for courage in those safe, joyful days. Nor any need for Patience either.

Sympathy—I had always thought that I felt sympathy. But now, looking back at my life with sadder, wiser eyes I saw that I had never had the roots of sympathy. For I had never known sorrow.

Unselfishness—sacrifice—one did not even know the meaning of those words when life was full and sweet.

Humor—there could be no real humor until laughter had been salted by tears.

Tolerance—how could I have mercy on my brother's pain or folly when I had never known pain myself, nor paid for my own folly?

How empty my life had been of anything but happiness, in those old days! But now, rummaging through my cluttered spirit, I found unexpected bits of all I needed—bright, lovely bits of courage and patience, sympathy, tolerance, unselfishness, sacrifice and humor. And, slowly, painfully, I began to put them together, mending my spoiled life.

Today I'm using my life again. It is patched and shabby and yet I know that it has a beauty it never had before. For before, when life was new and gay and carefree, my life was like all other carefree lives—just something to use and enjoy. But now, in the mending, I have put myself into my life. It is part of Me—and part of Him who made me and gave me the wherewithal to mend my broken heart.

Do not be afraid if Fate spoils your life, too.

For a little while it will seem wrecked beyond repair. But after a while if you are brave you will find a way to mend it, my dear. And then it will have a beauty which it never had before.

Monte Carlo

MONTE CARLO, March 17.—Monte Carlo opens a bleary morning eye. The sun is in splendor burning away the opalescent mists wreathing the hilltops. Yet somehow the town seems a tarnished toy. The streets are filled with ghosts of last night's pleasure throngs.

On the expansive sidewalks are mountainous piles of tables, chairs piled on one another, the debris of cigar and cigaret ends, broken cocktail glasses and burned out matches. Water carts and street sweepers with their comic brooms are attacking the litter.

Here and there are those villainous looking rag pickers, unbelievably filthy and aged, making furtive selections along the Terrace. Curtained and shuttered shops, soon to be so vitally alive, present a blank gloom. And over it all is the skulking and brooding presence of the Casino.

It is difficult to picture the desert waste as the place which was last night strung with colored lights, throbbing with orchestras and filled with giddy fashionables from all parts of the world. A cathedral bell rings, but it seems to find no response.

From the terraces one can see faintly the snow-clad peaks of the Corsican mountains. Below the terraces is the Tir-Aux Pigeons. Trap pigeon shooting is a daily event from 10 to 10:30 a. m. and attracts crack shots from all over the world.

Near the postoffice is the thermal establishment where every known sort of medicated bath may be taken. There is also a room where mineral waters from every health resort on the continent are on tap at normal temperature. This is so the cure commenced at any foreign spot may be continued.

The only visitor I saw in the early stroll was a young American who seemed to be counting his roll of francs with a troubled look. "Have a bad night?" I inquired. "Rotten," was his rejoinder and I was tempted to take him down by the sad sea waves and tell him about my $50.

A swarthy beady-eyed and persistent Oriental in turban and loaded down with rugs made his overtures. I had heard they will not at any cost miss the first sale of the day and I seemed to be the first prospective patron. I waved him away several times but he would run in front and stretch out his wares and wheedle, cajole and it seemed to me threaten. He was still dogging my heels at the hotel entrance and although I assumed a nonchalance I rather expected the plink of a dirk in my back. Maybe I missed a bargain.

Monte Carlo seems to awaken at the same moment with everybody rushing out briskly from hotels to amusements. Many make for the sidewalk cafe tables and stiff jolts before breakfast are not unusual. And here and there are the "system players" working feverishly over sheafs of figures. No one has found a system, yet it is almost unbelievable the number who continue to cling to the forlorn fantasy. This morning we drove past the villa where Ibanez, the Spanish novelist, passed away a few weeks ago.

In the afternoon we motored to Nice, a city of more than 200,000 inhabitants, but spent most of our time in Old Nice, which is an unknown land to many tourists, situated between the River Paillon and the sea. It is filled with narrow, tortuous streets. The shops are dark and many are without windows. Merchandise is displayed in the street. All the upper stories of buildings are flapping with wash. It is a place of excellent bargains, especially for antique collectors.

At a little roadside inn we stopped at dusk for refreshments. It was, for no apparent reason, called the Cafe of the Velocipede and sported a tiny bar and four tables for two. It was a peep of cafe life in France that is passing. Sandwiches and beer for six totaled 29 cents and a four-cent tip for the innkeeper left him groveling in a wild delirium of joy. Tonight we entrain for that dear Paree!

Eight Years of Amendment

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

January 16, 1928, was the eighth birthday of the prohibition amendment to the Constitution.

Many people's idea of the success of this measure has been obscured by reading the newspapers.

The newspapers print news and, as Alexander Black once pointed out, news as printed in the daily press is not an indication of the state of the facts in a community. For instance, if a Sunday school superintendent runs away with a member of his school that is news. But it is only because it is occasional and unusual. The unusual is news because it is interesting and striking, but it is not typical.

So every violation of the prohibition law has been played up as news, while the vast good that has been done has not been especially noticed.

The question has ceased to be a religious and sentimental one and become commercial and political. It is these aspects that are summarized.

In the first place the corner saloon has gone, never to return. There are very few people in the United States that want it back. This alone helps a good deal, for alcohol is not publicly exposed to sale to lure the youth of the country.

Very few decisions, and those in the strongholds of the wets, have been handed down adverse to the law. Decisions mostly have gone one way. They uphold the law. The amendment is considered strictly legal by the vast preponderance of judicial opinion. The prohibition code was ratified by three-fourths of the state legislatures.

During the time since this code went into effect the country has had an unparalleled period of prosperity. This may or may not be due to the prohibition amendment, but it is to be remembered that the wets declared that the amendment would ruin business.

Babson, the statistician, estimates that while $2,000,000,000 was formerly spent for liquor each year, not more than one-tenth of that sum now goes for it. Twenty-three million more people had savings accounts at the close of the first five years of prohibition than at the beginning and over one billion dollars of insurance a month has been purchased by the people. The sale of small homes has tripled during these eight years.

Three out of every four of the largest employers have replied favorably to the prohibition questionnaire. Only one in ten condemned the amendment. Deposits carried in labor banks were $11,000,000,000 last year. There were no labor banks eight years ago.

It was said that without booze hotels would be ruined, but 840 new hotels costing $400,000,000 were built during this period, including the largest hotel in the world at a cost of $27,000,000. During the three years ending 1925 the national wealth increased $35,000,000,000 and $49,000,000,000 during the last six years. Seventeen and 7-10 per hundred thousand was the decrease in the penal population in the United States and drunkenness fell from 186 per 100,000 in 1910 to 83 in 1923.

Dry American ships have proved popular and have been well patronized.

These are some economic facts that are hard to get around.

Prohibition may be immoral and unjustifiable, according to many writers in the press, but there is no doubt about its economic efficiency.

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD.

DR. JOHN B. WATSON, famous behaviorist, scores mothers for soft-boiling children. He says children will get "a break" when they have trainers from birth who will not pet, kiss or talk baby talk to them. If you want a genius, sezze, hard-boil the baby.

I know some grown folks who were not soft-boiled. They are now nine-minute eggs.

Speaking of giving children a chance, Columbia University has teachers six months old. They are babies in the nursery school and they teach prospective teachers of kindergartens and nursery schools what six months old babies require.

Samuel Ruck, of Cincinnati, is being divorced. His wife says he told her he could not afford to keep both her and his horse. It is one of those awful decisions a man is sometimes called upon to make.

Speaking of children getting a "break," today's papers tell us that Mary Willett died in a rooming house in New York, leaving her six-months-old baby entirely friendless.

What a break for someone with plenty of money!

The address is Bellevue Hospital.

Mrs. Ruth Pratt, New York's only woman alderman, publicly declares her colleagues not worth the chairs they sit upon. She says they are a worthless expense of $500,000 a year.

It is an old story. Some sit and fish, and some just sit.

Dr. Dorothy Scarborough, professor of English in a New York university, received an invitation from one of her boy pupils to go to the theater. He kept inviting her and finally she accepted. After the play the boy bought his teacher an ice cream soda, and as she was eating it he said: "I'll bet you don't know why I wanted you to go to the theater with me?"

"Why?" she asked.

"Because I always wanted to take an author some place," said the boy proudly.

"But I am not much of an author," said modest Miss Scarborough, who has written several successful books.

"I know that," said the heartless pupil, "but you were the best I knew."
